French Troops Repulsed

GERMANS TRY BOYCOTT MOVE

Events in the Ruhr followed rupture of relations between the Franco-Belgian control commission and German industrialists with startling suddenness today, and resulted in France ordering her forces forward not only to Bochum but to Dortmund as well.

Orders from Berlin's fuel administration this morning cut short negotiations at Essen. No more fuel is to be delivered the French, even if paid for. The French retaliated with announcement they would requisition what was necessary.

General De Gouette declared the summary action of the Germans freed his hands, and ordered his troops forward along a twenty-mile front. Bochum was seized; a new line of occupation was established inside of which the French hold twice as much Ruhr territory as before; French advance detachments entered the outskirts of Dortmun.

German industrialists demanded cessation of economic relations with France and Belgium, and urged that all trade cease between Germany and those countries.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—German industrial magnates moved today to thwart French seizures in the Ruhr.

August Thyssen, Ruhr coal magnate, is negotiating with British and American industrialists in an attempt to sell stock in his mines with a view of counteracting the French occupation.

The Krupps, whose great works are at Essen, are transferring shares in their business into England and Russia.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—A boycott movement was launched today against the French and Belgians, the agitation becoming countrywide. The association of grain dealers and the Hamburg produce exchange urgently appealed to their members not deal directly or indirectly with France-Belgium firms. The boycott request urged against buying goods or Franco-Belgian exchange or handling wares lying in France-Belgian harbors.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The French are advancing in the Ruhr along a twenty-mile front, doubling their seizure, it was indicated in dispatches from Essen today.

Dispatches from Bochum said a French division had occupied Dortmund, Mettman, Wulrath, Nevinges, Velbert and Langeberg.

HEALEY'S HOUSE REBELS' TARGET

DUBLIN, Jan. 15.—Irish insurgents during the night poured volleys of rifle fire into the suburban residence of Governor General "Tim" Healey. Several servants narrowly escaped injury

Healey was at the vice regal lodge at Phoenix park during the attack.

CANNOT BAN NUDE DANCING

Exhibitions of Pair in Vienna Are Protested by Press and Clergy.

VIENNA, (By Mail.)—Dancing in the nude, exhibitions of which are being given nightly in one of the largest concert halls is the latest attraction to which Viennese are flocking, and despite the clergy backed by the local press, the exhibitions have, since their inception about the middle of December, defied police interfeernce.

The dancing pair, appearing nightly before thousands of admiring patrons, are Anita Barber and Sebastian Droste, popular Viennese cabaret artists. They have been appearing for several years in scanty attire at cabarets and on the vaudeville stage, but only a few weeks ago did they startle their audience by appearing clad in nothing more than the proverbial "smile."

Their performance was undisturbed as were those of the following few nights. Then press and clergy began a storm of protest and a tirade against the police department for permitting such exhibitions. Finally the perfect of police decided to see for himself and visited the concert hall.

On beholding the dancers in their terpischorean interpretations of Chopin, Verdi and Gunod, he decided that there was nothing indecent about the exhibition, and that on the contrary it was a worthy contribution to the world of art.

Meanwhile Berber and Droste continue their nightly exhibitions in the "altogether," and the concert hall at which they are appearing is turning nightly away hundreds of disappointed "patrons of art."

GERRY REFUSES TO TALK

Roses Sent Her by Tellegen for Concert and Carried Home by Temperamental Singer.

BOSTON, Jan. 15.—If Geraldine Farrar and Lou Tellegen have patched the sails of their badly battered matrimonial ship, Farrar would not admit it today.

Temperamental "Gerry" appeared at a concert at Lynn, carrying a huge bunch of roses sent by the husband she is strenuously seeking to divorce. She took the roses home with her after the performance.

When newspapermen, who saw Telegen's card with the roses ought to interview her, she sent back a message which indicated she was convinced that all newspaper men are under a curse. Later she called a policeman and threatened to have reporters arrested who sought to talk to her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—"I sent the lady no flowers" was what Lou Tellegen said today when asked "how come" as to reports that Geraldine Farrar carried a huge bouquet of roses bearing his card when she sang last night at Lynn, Mass.

He first thought someone was joking with him, he said, and only laughed until shown the dispatch telling of Miss Farrar's receipt of the roses.

Then he denied that he had patronized the florist.

Tellegen reiterated that he saw no chance of a reconciliation with the famous singer, who now is suing him for a divorce.

LABOR BOARD HAS SESSION

CONTROVERSIES OVER WAGES AND RULES ARE HEARD.

Twenty-eight of Smaller Railroads and Employes Involved in Cases Before Commission Monday.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Controversies over wages and working rules for shop workers on twenty-eight of the smaller railroads were heard by the railroad labor board today.

The hearing is expected to wind up the disputes on these roads which have protested the wage reduction ordered by the board last July.

Following the board's decision, more than a hundred roads entered protests, claiming the reduction was not large enough. Simultaneously shopmen's representatives on a number of roads filed complaints that the cuts went too far.

With the exception of twenty-eight small roads, the disputes were voluntarily settled without appeal to the board.

TURKS RENEW DEMANDS

LAUSANNE, Jan. 15.—The Turks today renewed their demands that the entire Ottoman debt with interest be divided among all former Turkish states, and the allies, who flatly rejected the proposal Saturday, consented to consider it further.

CANNOT DIVERT WATER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Decisions of lower courts holding that the Snake Creek Mining and Tunnel company cannot divert water from the Snake creek, Utah, irrigation project or compel farmers there to pay for water flowing into the creek from one of the company's tunnels were upheld by the supreme court today.

In constructing a tunnel, the company struck water which flowed into the irrigation project established by the farmers in 1872. It then demanded compensation of $40,000 a year for this water, which the farmers, composing the Midway Irrigation company, refused to pay. Efforts of the tunnel company to direvt the water thereafter were blocked in lower courts.

BERLIN HAS ROOM TO GROW.

BERLIN, (By Mail)—Berlin is bigger than New York—in area. The German capital stands second only to London in the acreage it covers. Berlin, with four millions, has plenty of room for intensive building construction, as it covers such a vast acreage that many open spaces dot the municipality.

Atlantic ports in 1922 bought twice as much lumber from Pacific coast ports as in the previous year.

The Columbia river is steadily digging its channel deeper at the entrance due to the confining action of jetties.

LITHUANIANS HOLD MEMEL

LONDON, Jan. 15. — Lithuanian troops raking the central part of Memel with machine guns and rifle fire have driven defending French troops to the outskirts, according to dispatches from the Baltic port today.

The Lithuanians occupied the center of the city following their invasion today, the French holding surrounding portions.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—Lithuanian troops fighting for possession of Memel have occupied the French prefecture where the white flag was run up, according to dispatches from the battle swept city today. Shooting in the city proper has ceased, it was reported.

BOOTLEG CASES FLOOD COURTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The dawn tomorrow of the fourth year of constitutional prohibition will find the federal courts clogged with almost twice as many prohibition cases as were on the dockets a year ago.

This was shown today by a comprehensive summary of enforcement work during the third year of national prohibition, which was prepared by the prohibition bureau.

As the third dry year ends tonight, a grand total of 68,562 prohibition cases are pending in the federal courts as compared with 38,851 January 1, 1922. In addition there are many more thousands of cases in state and municipal courts.

The large increase was partly accounted for by 47,132 new cases which were filed during the year, while the congestion in the courts resulted in a disposal of only 17,412 suits. Officials claimed that the increase also was caused by a stricter enforcement of the law.

Summarizing its work during the last year, the prohibition bureau reported as follows:

Fines received from convicted violators totaled $3,172,330.15.

Including fines, forfeitures and collections, the prohibition bureau turned into the federal treasury a total of $4,804,271.95—more than half the cost of the federal enforcement organization. Number of convictions obtained in federal courts, 21,640.

Indictments found or informations filed, 35,469.

Twenty distilleries and distillery warehouses have been seized for violations of the Volstead act. Indictments have been returned against all of them, and to date eleven distillers have been convicted.

A total of 257 breweries fell into the toils of the federal authorities for violations during the year, and seventy were placed under seizure with armed guards stationed on their premises. Convictions have been so far obtained in forty cases, while seventy-nine indictments have been returned. Fines paid by brewers during the year totaled $155,950.

The new policy of the bureau of invoking the nuisance provisions of the Volstead act under which premises on which persistent violations occur may be closed for one year already has achieved results.

Adopted only during the last half of 1922, it has already been invoked with success in West Virginia, California, Illinois, New Jersey, New York and part of Louisiana. In California two import hotels have been closed.

PROGRESSIVES HAVE LOSS

First Skirmish on Farm Credits Issue Goes to Conservatives.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Progressives lost their first skirmish on the farm credits issue in the senate today.

The Norris bill was displaced in favor of the Capper and Lenroot-Anderson farm credits bills when a vote was taken on demand of Senator Norris, chairman of the progressive bloc.

Norris contended that his bill creating a $100,000,000 government marketing agency, already reported by the agriculture committee, should be considered before the other two bills reported by the banking and currency committee.

Senator McLean, head of the banking and currency committee, moved to lay aside the ship subsidy and begin to discussion of the Capper and Lenroot-Anderson bill and his motion passed without objection.

The rules were strict at the college.

Accordingly, when Mr. Foster arrived to take Miss Joy out in his car, it was with very mixed feelings that she mentioned the matter to the principal.

"You know, Miss Joy," said the personage, "I only allow the students to go out with their fiances. Are you engaged to Mr. Foster?"

"No-no," was the reply; "but if you will let me go, I shall be by the time we get back!"

MORE CLUES TO ROBBERS

Dead Denver Bandit Found in Private Garage.

FINGERPRINTS TO BE TAKEN

Thought Man Wounded by Mint Guards.

Had Been Frozen for Some Time—Another Suspect in Connection With Mint Holdup Is Arrested in Chicago.

DENVER, Jan. 15.—Efforts to establish the identity of the dead mint bandit whose frozen body was found in an automobile in a garage in the residential district here yesterday, were to be made today by comparing finger prints of the man with those on the shotgun with which one of the band killed a bank guard in the daring theft of $200,000 here recently.

The finger prints will also be compared with those on file at police headquarters. Local police officials were confident today that discovery of the body and the arrest of a suspect in Chicago will lead to the capture of the remainder of the gang.

The slain bandit, it was believed, is one who was shot by a mint guard as the robbers sped away in an automobile after the holdup. One of the men who was standing on the automobile's running board collapsed from a wound but was pulled into the car by his companions.

Bandit From Chicago.

Marks in the clothing of the dead mint bandit whose body was found frozen in an automobile in a private garage here yesterday indicated he was from Chicago, police said today. The body was found lying in the front seat of the car. A wound over the heart had caused death.

The bandit was wounded in the exchange of shots between mint guards and the bandit gang that shot and killed a bank guard and escaped with $200,000 in currency in front of the mint here several weeks ago.

The dead man apparently had been deserted by his companions shortly after the holdup.

Police renewed their efforts today to get further information of the band, following word that a suspect was being held in Chicago.

A plumber, Fred A. McGee, who chanced to look in the garage and discovered the body, probably will receive a $5,500 reward offered for any information leading to the discovery of the robbers.

Denver police asserted the discovery of the slain bandit's body resulted from a tip from Chicago. Authorities denied they had communicated with the Denver police.

"We are sure we have the leader of the Denver gang in custody," Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes declared. "We have wired Denver for photographs and thumb prints of Hollywood."

Hollywood was traced to this city following the Springfield holdup. It was discovered he had some dental work done in the Woods builing. After the Denver robbery, police learned Hollywood and "Dicky" Williams, another suspect, were in Kansas City or Chicago.

Police denied they were looking for another suspect here but indicated they had information which they hoped would lead to arrests in other cities.

Denies Knowledge of Holdup.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Round-up of the bandit gang which held up and escaped with $200,000 from a government automobile in front of the Denver mint last month, was believed near today.

One man, who, police believed, was the leader of the bandits, was under arrest here, and the dead body of another member of the gang was found in Denver.

The man arrested here gave the name of Daniel Culhane. He was grilled thruout the night, but denied any knowledge of the robbery. Police declared his description tallied exactly with that of Albert T. Hollywood, alleged leader of the gang.

Shortly after Culhane's arrest, Denver police discovered a frozen, bullet riddled body in an automobile in a garage in the Capitol Hill district of Denver. Authorities declared the man had been dead for several weeks.

A 30-30 rifle was in the machine.

Marks on the read man's clothes indicated he was from Chicago.

Culhane's arrest followed a tip from Kansas City that he had called long distance to an underworld character there and that during the conversation the Denver mint robbery was mentioned.

Culhane was also believed to have led the bandits who raided the Citizens' bank of Springfield, Mo., shot down a policeman and bank employe, escaping with $20,000. The suspect also denied participation in this robbery and asserted he had not been out of Chicago for three years.

He was arrested in his room at the Washington hotel. An automatic pistol was found under his pillow, and sewed in his vest were several money wrappers. He refused to explain these. Culhane declared he was a member of a million dollar rambling syndicate here. He carried little money.

SEARCHLIGHT ON TAX COVER

SOME LEGISLATORS SEE HARM IN EXEMPTIONS.

Also Realize That Millions a Year Invested in Municipal Bonds and Practically Taken From Tax Sphere.

How to get more tax income without crippling the individual who has nothing to conceal is a big problem before the Nebraska legislature. Some members are opening their eyes to the realization that tax exemptions go a long way toward eating in on the state's revenue. A few of these members probably would go so far as to cut the exemption list out entirely.

Another matter which is brought to the attention of legislators is the fact an aggregate amount estimated as high as a billion a year is invested in municipal bonds thruout the United States. This is taken to mean that every year a vast fortune is practically removed from the list of taxable property. In recent years exemption after exemption has been added to the list.

"And if this continues, where will we land?" asked a member of the house.

It is generally conceded that some sort of income tax law will be passed at this session. Some would go further than the Osterman bill proposes. This bill would hit only the man who now pats an income tax to the governor. For some time there has grown a sentiment in some circles for a tax on all incomes from the smallest to the greatest. This to constitute the personal tax of every taxpayer. Those favoring such plan would abolish the tax on household goods and the like tho an arrangement would be worked out for the taxing of real estate. The more radical plan of taking in every salary and income has not gone beyond the gossip stage.

There are many who contend that the present valuation scheme in taxing personal property is all wrong. Valuation is something difficult to define. Here is a plan suggested in conversation by one who is interested in taxation:

"How much does he make? What does his money make for him?"

This man suggests that a tax of .25 mills or one-fourth of one per cent on a salary of $1,600 a year would bring in $2.50 a year. He believes that under the plan of taxing all incomes, great and small, the city of Lincoln and other cities and communities would derive greater income from tax than they now derive. He suggests that the plan would be a death blow to tax dodgers.

There are hundreds of people in Lincoln who do not pay any taxes, poll or other sort. The friend of the salary or income tax scheme furnishes this example:

"Here are two men having the same income. Each receives, we'll say, $4,000 a year. The one invests his money in taxable property. He buys a home and helps build up the community. The other squanders his money and doesn't pay one penny in taxes. Here you are putting a penalty on thrift. It occurs to me that the squanderer should pay the same tax on what he squanders as does the thrifty one on what he saves."

TAX ON CARS CAN BE CUT

GOVERNOR BRYAN SUGGESTS PLAN OF HIS OWN.

Stop Using Fees for New Construction and There Will Be Plenty Left for Maintenance.

As the result of an inquiry Governor Bryan finds that the department of public works has been construing maintenance to include blade work on roads and in that way has been using automobile license fees in large part to build new federal roads instead of for road dragging and other labor of maintenance. Thus, the governor says car owners have been contributing about $,500,000 a year for the federal construction than they thought they were.

He believes the result of this investigation proves conclusively that his proposal to cut in half the automobile license will lose the state no federal aid and still there will be more than enough left in the hands of the counties to maintain federal roads already constructed to be built within the next two years. He admits the cutting off of automobile fees will reduce the road building program to the extent such fees have been used for new construction on federal roads, but he thinks the people desire the road building program curtailed to meet diminished incomes.

"I wondered why the cost of maintenance was about equal to construction," said Governor Bryan, "so I asked for figures. The department of public works reports an expenditure in 1921 of $1,049,886 for new structure, new equipment, grading, etc., and an expenditure of $1,003,131 for general maintenance. We can have the engineers cut out blade work on new construction of federal roads and reduce the road program to that extent. We can cut the auto license fee in half and still have enough to maintain federal highways and the counties will have enough funds to work with."

"If we reduce our state aid $1,500,000 as the outgoing governor recommended, we will lose an equal amount of federal aid. If we cut the automobile license we will lose no federal aid, and we will have plenty for maintenance."

Some critics of the governor's plan had reported that a reduction of the automobile license would leave the state short of money to maintain federal aid roads and the result would be the state would get no federal aid. If the automobile license money is not used for new construction it will be sufficient for maintenance, Governor Bryan says, tho he admits that would reduce the road building program to some extent.

The automobile tax averages $12 a car. There are 250,000 licenses issued This makes $3,000,000 of revenue from that source in two years. Governor Bryan would reduce the average license $6 or one-half. This would not reduce the property tax for roads, if such a tax is continued to meet federal aid, but the governor believes it amounts to a reduction of property tax because there is one automobile to every family in the state.

The use of maintenance funds derived from automobile tax for blade work or new construction has been approved by county boards but the department of public works has the last say with authority to approve or disapprove.

Governor Bryan is not now prepared to say whether he will recommend acceptance of the full federal aid for the next two years, amounting to $3,000,000, or how he would raise the state funds, but his message indicates that he would accept federal aid for the present. His message opposes a tax on gasoline as a sales tax which falls heavily upon the rich and big corporations.

WILL CONFER OVER MATTER

MINIMUM WEIGHT OF HOGS IN CARLOADS TO BE DISCUSSED.

Interstate Commerce Commission Shows Further Indications or Desire to Cooperate With State Commissions.

Representatives of the state commissions of Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Texas will meet in Omaha Tuesday to confer over the question of what is a proper minimum weight for live stock shipped in carload lots.

This conference is called in response to a request of the interstate commerce commission, which desires the best judgment of the states on the matter. The Iowa commission recently put in an order making 16,000 pounds the minimum for hog shipments. In Nebraska and elsewhere it is 17,000. The railroads went to the interstate commerce commission and asked for an order that would have upset the Iowa finding.

Instead, however, of proceeding to do as formerly, consider the matter entirely from the interstate angle, the federal body has asked for a joint consideration of the whole scheme of minimum weights. The state commissions desire to exchange ideas among themselves before they take the matter up further with the interstate body.

Three plans have been suggested, that the states have a joint hearing to be followed by a hearing by the federal commission, after which they get together, that the states have separate hearings and confer afterwards, and that there be a joint hearing between the states and the interstate commerce commission.

While the minimum weight proposition is important to the shippers, the fact that the interstate commerce commission has shown so conciliatory an attitude toward the state commissions is what interests the members of the latter most. There are various questions entering into the weight question, as western hogs are sturdier of build than those in the east and southeast and the same is true of middle western cattle as compared with the southwestern breed.

The whole proposition involved is what is a proper return in earnings for cars devoted to this branch of traffic, and weight is a big factor.

IDENTITY WAS EASILY MIXED

C. S. TOWNLEY, WAS IN POSSESSION OF GRIFFITH'S PAPERS.

Only Identification of Real Name Lay in a Letter in Pocket of Deceased, Which Was Signed "Ruth."

It was easy for Sheriff Claudo Hensel to reach the conclusion that C. S. Townley, killed Saturday evening when a train struck the auto he drove, was G. H. Griffith. Mr. Townley had been driving an auto formerly driven by Griffith, had Griffith's traveling bag with the Griffith bank book and check book, and other papers belonging to Mr. Griffith.

According to Einar Johnson, cashier for the non-partisan league organization, Mr. Griffith had been traveling near Ravenna when he was informed from headquarters in Lincoln that he was expected to meet Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, at Des Moines, Saturday.

He left the auto and papers with Mr. Townley, expecting the latter to deliver them to the non-partisan league office at Lincoln, to be held until his return, and took a train from where the telephone message caught him.

Mr. Townley returned to Lincoln with the auto, did part of a day's work in the office in the Little building, and took Miss Viola Grasse, stenographer, out for a short ride before taking her to her home at 1435 N street. They had been driving only a short time before the crash that cost Mr. Townley's life.

Mr. Townley had arranged to deliver the papers at the office before spending the night with Einar Johnson, according to Mr. Johnson. Both C. S. Townley and Mr. Griffith had been organizing the league in Nebraska, and were driving one of the league autos. Mr. Townley and Miss Grasse had been in the league office an hour and a half before the accident.

Mr. Johnson waited at the office for Mr. Townley to return for the evening engagement, until he decided that something had gone decidedly wrong with the arrangement, but did not hear of the death until the following morning, he said.

Meanwhile Mr. Townley had taken Miss Grasse toward Havelock, and the two had started onto the crossing leading to O street, Havelock. They were discussing the Patriot Motors building with its numerous windows, when struck by the Burlington train.

Miss Grasse, at the hospital Monday morning, stated that she did not know whether or not Mr. Townley saw the train. She said she could not remember seeing a headlight on the engine. She was still in doubt as to the place where the accident happened.

Sheriff Claude Hensel said Monday that as far as he knew there would be no need for an inquest, as the death was due purely to an accident, in his opinion.

The only paper on Mr. Townley's person that might have identified him was a letter from Mrs. Townley, but it was signed "Ruth." There were more Griffith papers in the wreck than Townley papers.

"I was closing the non-partisan league office at 5 o'clock when I met Mr. Townley, who had just returned from Omaha," Miss Grasse said. "He invited me to take a short ride before dinner. We drove out on the Cornhusker highway a few miles and were returning when the train struck us. I didn't see it until the crash."

STRUCK HOLD-UP IN FACE

Mrs. Helen Mitchell, 3914 Vine, stepped from her home at 7 a. m. Monday and was confronted by a man who told her to throw up her hands. She struck him in the face with her hand bag and he ran away. Mrs. Mitchell proceeded on her way downtown and later notified the police department.

Mrs. Mitchell told the police that she did not go back into her house to telephone about the holdup lest she might frighten her children.

Fire in the Capital Bindery, 315 South Eleventh street, did little damage. The fire department was summoned, but the flames were put out with chemicals before it arrived. The fire caught when the furnace became too hot and ignited some paper on the floor.

LOOK FOR TILT ON SOUND PRODUCTION

Representative Lundy Prepared to Recommend Installation of Amplifier Arrangement to Uplift Oratory.

There were indications Monday that members of the house would not unanimously agree to the oratorical uplift scheme proposed by Representative Lundy who was prepared to report on cost of amplifier installation when the house convened after the three-day recess.

It has been suggested that if the voice of the legislator be enlarged eight or ten times, more than local benefit should be derived from such enlargement. In this connection, speculation is ripe relative to a general broadcast thru the state's apparatus of all legislative oratory, good and bad.

The cost of installing the apparatus which will cause the human voice to roll, thrill and carry, is estimated by Representative Lundy at $250 with a salvage value of at least $125 when all the orators have rolled to the end of the session. One or two members say that it is not the cost they object to but the principle of spending the state's money in any amount for knicknacks.

It also is suggested that if legislators be required to march to the front of the chamber and speak the magnified language, some of the more timid will keep to their seats and thus the legislature will be deprived of much good and wise speechmaking.

LITHUANIANS BATTLE FRENCHMEN AT MEMEL

Allied Warships Racing To Rescue of French In Prussian Border City.

HUNGARIANS ARE MOBILIZING

Trying to Take Advantage of the Seizure of Ruhr.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—France will requisition such quantities of coal as she needs from Germany, in consequence of the German resolution to suspend deliveries, Premier Poincare decided today.

The premier conferred with Minister de Lasteyrie regarding collection of a 40 per cent tax on Ruhr coal production. They also had under discussion a project to create new currency in the Ruhr to replace the mark, which tumbled today to unprecedented low levels.

FRENCH TROOPS ADVANCE

Bochum, Industrial Capital of Stinnes, Is Seized by the French —Other Points Reported Taken.

New conflicts of arms, aftermaths of the world war, broke out in Europe today. Lithuanians and French fought in the streets of Memel and Hungarian troops were reported mobilizing on the Rumanian border.

French troops are making a desperate attempt to hold Memel, while allied warships are racing to the rescue. The attackers, seizing upon the Ruhr situation to handicap the allies in defending the Prussian border city, drove the French troops back from trenches outside the city.

The Rumanian minister in Paris disclosed that war clouds again are lowering over the Balkans, in a report that bands of Hungarian troops have already entered his country.

In the Ruhr, French troops moved forward to occupy additional territory, including Bochum. A dispatch from Berlin said that the advance guard of the French have entered that city, the "capital" of the great industrial interests of Hugo Stinnes.

War in the near east may be added to the turmoil, if the Lausanne conference fails.

Greece is reported moving troops to Thrace.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—French and Lithuanian troops battled in the heart of Memel for possession of the city today.

The Lithuanians, entering the city, drove back a handful of French troops who had entrenched themselves before the gates.

British and French warships were reported Saturday enroute to Memel to reinforce the French troops. Memel is a neutral zone under the league of nations. It is on the Prussian boruer and is particularly desired by Lithuania, whose irregular troops are taking advantage of the Ruhr situation to attack.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Hungarian troops, bands of which have made incursions into Rumanian territory, are concentrating on the frontier, Premier Poincare was notified by the Rumanian minister here today.

Poincare asked the interallied military commission in Budapest to investigate the report.

Ban on Supply.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The German coal commissioner in Berlin has prohibited Ruhr operators from supplying the French with coal or coke even if paid for and dramatic retaliation by France is expected, according to dispatches received here today.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Orders have been given to occupy the Ruhr as far as Dortmund as the result of German refusals to accept the French coal production plans, it was announced today.

Move on Bochum.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—Bochum, where Hugo Stinnes' steel factories are located, was occupied by French troops this afternoon. The invaders thus tightened their grip on the heart of the Ruhr industrial region.

When the bluc clad pollus arrived at Bochum, all work in the city immediately stopped, says the Lokal Anzeiger. This was done according to prearranged plans.

Bochum was seething with excitement, communists in the streets were distributing leaflets advocating war with France and demanding the resignation of Chancellor Cuno.

Billeting parties of French troops have arrived in the suburbs of Dortmund.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—French troops in the Ruhr moved on Bochum today.

Reports from the newly occupied zone said French artillery and infantry advanced from the little city of Kettwey upon the important industrial capital of the interests of Hugo Stinnes.

The advancing French troops have occupied Dahlhausen and Linden, according to word from Essen.

Occupation of Bochum, even more than seizure of Essen, will give the invaders a grip on one of the main arteries of German industry.

The great plants of Stinnes will come within the new French line if Bochum is encircled.

France today increased her forces at Essen and extended the new line of occupation to include Hardigan and Gelsenkirchen. Last night troops pushed northward to Kupperdreh and Niederwenigern.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Belgian and French troops today started extension of their occupation of the Ruhr to include Bochum, moving forward to a line thru Hattingen, Rechtenhausen and Bottrop.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—French troops extending occupation of the Ruhr have arrived in Bochum, headquarters of the Stinnes industries according to a Central News dispatch from Berlin.

"FIRST LOVE"

—The Story of a Childhood Romance that Struggled Against the Temptations of the New York Business World.

By Caroline Crawford

The day that Jessie Jackson and her family left the apartment adjoining the one where Peter Manton lived was a difficult one for both the young people. To be suddenly separated after spending twelve years together as playmates, school friends and then high school lovers seemed the first great obstacle in their way. Jessie was six and Peter seven when they first became acquainted and now this living as next door neighbors was to be a thing of the past.

As the last moving van rolled away bearing the Jackson furniture and Jessie and her mother stepped into the taxi which was to take them to their new home, Jessie met Peter's eyes looking down at them. He was standing at the apartment house window, his hands in his pockets and a cigaret between his lips. They waved a hasty goodby and Jessie was gone.

The next morning at high school Jessie found Peter waiting at the gate for her. He was pale and looked as if he had scarcely slept the night before. "It's no use, Jessie, I simply can't stand this being separated," he said as they stopped under the arch to chat and wait for the next bell. "I think I better give up school, get a position, and we better elope."

"Elope!" echoed Jessie. "Why, Peterkins, are you crazy? Do you think I want to start a high school scandal? You little silly boy, don't you know they could annul our marriage? We aren't either of us of age and, besides, I want you to graduate. I wouldn't think of marrying a man who didn't at least hold a high school diploma."

This last sentence of hers seemed to be the one thing which brought him back to his senses. "So you wouldn't marry me if I didn't have a diploma, eh?" he laughed. "Well plenty of these boobs will soon have one; would any of them do?"

"Old Peterkins, do be sensible. Have you done your Latin yet? We were so busy I didn't have time to do mine."

Peter gave her a slip of yellow paper with a string of Latin translations. "I tried to imitate your writing so you wouldn't even have to copy it," he said.

"You'd make an excellent forger," laughed Jessie, and then, seeing one of the professors, walked toward the school with Peter in her trail.

"But you can't imagine how blank that window—the window we used for signals—looked this morning," complained Peter as he caught up with Jessie. "Mother tells me three old maids have rented the apartment. Isn't that the limit?"

"I don't see why you should care who moves in there, now," suddenly declared Jessie. "You don't want another girl just my age to move in do you?"

"You know I don't, green eyes," he sniffed.

"Green eyes? Oh, Peter, if we hadn't just moved I'd take you up on that. As it is, I'll see you at the noon hour."

Mid-day Plans.

Jessie and Peter ate their lunch under the great maple tree in the high school yard. It was getting cool, but Jessie wore her heavy sport coat and Peter had a dark red sweater under his coat. They were known as the "engaged students," and most of their chums let them alone, respecting a typical Paul and Virginia love affair.

"Now that we can't see each other at a minute's notice by our signals at the window we might as well set aside certain days when I may call upon you formally," said Peter between munches of a ham sandwich.

"Wednesday evening, of course," laughed Jessie, "that's bean night and I should think you could manage to come out for week-ends Saturday and Sunday."

"I could if your parents didn't object."

"Fiddlesticks, mother thinks the world of you, Peter."

"Maybe," reluctantly admitted Peter, "but your father passes me on the street and doesn't speak."

"I told you about him the other day. He's money mad and doesn't speak to any one when he has a big deal on."

"That's all right, but I don't think I'll begin week-ending it until I try out Wednesday evening," cautiously declared Peter. "They probably didn't think anything of my dropping in to see you when we were neighbors, but now that you are out in the suburbs when I begin to appear at regular times they'll wake up."

"It's about time they did," smiled Jessie, attacking a piece of chocolate cake.

But when the afternoon session of school closed and Peter bid Jessie goodby at the station, they both looked at each other in dismay. Three o'clock and time to part! That was just the very time they called their own, when they could go hiking, skating or read poetry.

"Guess I'll hop on with you and ride out," said Peter.

When they reached their destination he decided to see her to her gate. But at the gate they met her mother and so he went in. Mrs. Jackson, despite Jessie's comment that she liked him, looked troubled when she saw Peter. She showed him the new home, took him into the garden, pointed out where the garage was to be built and played the role of gracious hostess, but when she met Jessie in the dining room alone she whispered, "Please get Peter out of here before your father comes home."

Two hours later when Jessie returned from the station where she had left Peter, Jessie sought her mother and wanted to know why her father objected to Peter.

"He doesn't object to Peter," explained Mrs. Jackson. "Peter is a good enough boy, but that is just it—he's a boy. Your father and I think that just as you are about to graduate you ought to go with a real man. You leave it to your father, dear. Some evening very soon he is going to bring a very eligible young man home to call upon you."

The Young Man Appears.

Jessie made up her mind that she would meet the young man whom her father labelled as "eligible" and "a man suitable for a girl in your station" with an icy stare. If they

COAL PRICES ARE PROBED

COMMISSION FINDS PROFITEERING IS TO BLAME.

Overdevelopment of Mining Industry and Recurring Strikes Also Held Responsible for High Costs.

WASHINGTON, Jan 15. — Widespread profiteering, over-development of the mining industry and recurrent strikes during the last few years were blamed for the present high prices of coal by the United States coal commission today in its first report to congress on the national coal problem.

The commission warned that unless the industry reforms itself thru the elimination of frequent strikes and surplus miners, federal regulations will be necessary.

"Whatever the cause or the merits of the labor controversy, it is clear that an indefinite repetition of these crisis in the production and distribution of coal would be intolerable," the report stated. "Industry and the home alike must be freed from the menace of constant interruption of their coal supply."

The major findings of the commission, which will be supplemented in later reports include.

1.—The number of miners in the industry has increased during the last few years until it is now 200,000 in excess of the demand. The present number is sufficient to mine 800,000,000 tons of coal a year or about 250,000,000 tons greater than the largest production this country and the foreign markets have ever been able to absorb.

2—The car supply of the country has been virtually adequate during the recent months and the railroads have been moving a supply of coal that under normal winter conditions would far exceed the demand.

3—"Collective bargaining should rest upon reason rather than force. American law and public opinion recognize the right to organize into unions and the right to work without let or hindrance."

4—Announcement that investigation would be made of conditions in Logan county, West Virginia, and some places in Pennsylvania, where the miners allege they are denied the right of peaceful persuasion and free speech and the operators charge the United Mine workers have resorted to violence to organize the fields.

5—"There has been profiteering in the sense that grossly exorbitant profits have been taken at times by many operators, brokers and retailers."

6—"Combined charges of the railroad, the wholesaler and the retailer in most localities exceed the price of coal at the mines."

HUMAN ASHES IN DEPOSIT.

DENVER, Jan. 15.—Human ashes, carelessly dumped into a tin safety deposit box, repose on a shelf in an unused downtown basement. According to a slip of paper in the box, the ashes are those of Orland A. Smith, cremated in Riverside, Cal., October 25, 1897. How they came to be in the basement is a mystery. Until recently the place has been used as a storage room for an auction company. Employes of the company discovered the urn containing the ashes while removing goods from the basement. They believe the ashes were received in a purchase of second-hand goods. What will become of the ashes is a question.

OLLIE CHILL IN CUSTODY

Veteran American League Umpire Questioned in Connection With McGregor Shooting.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15.—Ollie Chill, veteran American league umpire, and two companions were being questioned here today in connection with the fatal shooting of Edward J. McGregor.

McGregor was found dead in his apartment Saturday night with four bullet wounds in his chest. Chill and two other men were found in the apartment. Officers say all three were intoxicated.

A chauffeure told police that he drove the four men to several saloons, after which he took them to McGregor's apartment Chill and the others say all they remember is hearing two shots fired.

PREPARE CAMPAIGN ON VOLSTEAD ACT

Organized Labor, Gompers Says, Plans to "Make America Once More Home of Sane and Free."

CINCINNATI, Jan. 15.—Organized labor prepared a campaign against the Volsteady act here today.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor, conferred with the executive board of the brewery workers' international union on plans "to make America once more the home of the sane and the free."

Gompers declared the Volstead act goes far in advance of what was contemplated by the original law, the eighteenth amendment.

Labor's fight for a revision of the dry law to legalize the sale of light wine and beer calls for personal interviews with every member of congress to acquaint them with labor's position, it was learned.

The fight will be based on the premise that beer and wine are not injurious, but are actually healthful beverages, the labor chief said.

"Where the fanatical drys err is in their attempt to define how beverages containing more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol are intoxicating," he asserted.

Gompers made it clear that labor will not sanction a return of the saloon. "The saloon is an institution of the past. It is gone forever," said Gompers.

JAIL BARS STRAIN LOVE

Physician and Housewife Who Eloped From Wisconsin Arrested in Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 15.—Jail bars proved too much of a strain on the slender bonds of love ties in another "eternal triangle" here today.

Dr. Charles H. Fry, physician of Beloit, Wis., and Mrs. Linna Rosentretter, also of Beloit, declared from their prison cells today they had paid in tears for their elopement last September.

The couple was arrested on complaint of Albert Rosentretter, the "wronged" husband, who followed his wife and Fry to Kansas City, where he found the former prominent physician employed as a strikebreaker in the railroad yards. The love cote he found was a rear room on the third floor of a cheap rooming house.

Mrs. Rosentretter pleaded with her husband for "another chance" and he promised to take her back to their home in Beloit.

Dr. Fry also declared he was anxious to return to the old life "I have gone thru a living hell these last five months and want to go back to the old life," he said. "I have been a fool."

Police, however, refused to release the couple pending an investigation.

Wild scenes were enacted thruout the reservation today following discovery of a 2,000 barrel oil well Excitement ran high as scouts raced to be the first in the field and sleepy Indians were hauled from their beds to grasp bundles of money from those seeking leases. They remained blinking and unconvinced as the speculator dashed away to the next house.

But the Kaws feel assured that their new found fortunes are their reward for selecting Lucy Tyiap Eads as their chief.

UPPER CLASS USING DOPE

COPELAND SAYS NUMBER OF ADDICTS IS GROWING.

Believes That Steps Should Be Taken to Avert Disgrace From Thousands of Fine Men and Women.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Enormous quantities of opium and its manufactured products are being consumed by the so-called "upper classes" in this country, according to Dr. Royal Copeland, health officer of Great New York and United States senator-elect.

"The decrease in the use of drugs by the under-world, if there is a decrease," Dr. Copeland said, "is very slight, altho the police are constantly on the watch and continually raiding underworld dope houses. But the people of the upper classes, over whom the police have comparatively little control, and whose personal habits they are not in a position to regulate are taking to drugs more and more every day.

"In the health department we come in contact with almost every man or woman arrested for a crime of violence," Dr. Copeland continued, "and I can state positive that there is not one criminal in a hundred that is not a dope fiend. Crimes may be planned with cool heads, but they are executed by men who have absorbed their courage from the pipe or the needle.

Good Families Involved.

"But aside from these people of warped mentality, we are hundreds every year who come from good families, and have been dragged down by opium. And these are not always young people, as might be expected, but fathers of families and mothers too. Men and women who are highly respected in their social circles, but who have taken up dope and let it get the best of them."

The only possible means of stopping the growth of the drug evil by its international agreement, Dr. Copeland declared. He said that the nations of the world must agree to limit the amount of drugs manufactured before any important progress can be made. The actual amount of drugs brought into this country during the course of a year is impossible to estimate.

Over 100,000 pounds of opium and its bi-products are legally imported every year into the United States, Copeland declared. This is approximately six grains per capita, or twice as much as is imported by any other civilized country in the world.

Of course, a great deal of this is used legitimately in medical preparations.

Poppy Fields Subsidized.

The poppy fields of India, which are among the largest in the world, are subsidized by the British government the health commissioner said.

In China, Persia and Arabia thousands of acres are planted with the dope flower. Large quantities of the raw opium is brought to this country for refining and then exported. After being sent out to Mexico and other countries, enormous quantities are smuggled back again, according to the doctor.

"There is at the present time practically no hope of stopping the evil and popular feeling on the question must be aroused soon, or the whole country will seriously feel the effects," accordthat the use of dope is assuming the that the us eof dope is assuming the proportions of a real peril.

Dr. Copeland expressed the fear that the public would not realize the danger until the dope evil had gained a tremendous hold upon the American people.

"And until the country does realize what is happening," he said, "there is no hope. Thousands of the finest men and women will die in disgrace if immediate action is not taken."

"FIRST LOVE"

The Story of a Childhood Romance that Struggled Against the Temptations of the New York Business World.

(Copyright.)

By Caroline Crawford

were left alone to chat she would not volunteer a single remark. She even hid a pin in her blouse so she might stick her finger occasionally with it to keep herself awake.

But Jessie was young and did not reckon with youth or the first impression a good-looking, eligible young man makes upon a girl in her teens. She entered the living room at her father's command and was introduced to a tall, slender, perfectly groomed man who quite took away her breath.

"Meet Mr. Nelson, my associate and new partner," her father said, and then Jessie's head began to whirl and she found her dainty hand between two warm, capable hands. For a few seconds her father and mother remained with them, then her father started the new electric player-piano and she found herself alone with "the most fascinating man I ever met in my life."

That is the way she expressed it later when talking to some of her girl chums. "I even forgot Peter for the moment," she said. "And, when I can forget Peter you can just imagine how swept away I was."

But after Mr. Nelson had talked to her for several moments Jessie remembered her former plans—to give this young man the icy stare and even fall asleep immediately, arousing herself by the aid of a pin and begging his pardon. She did play the role of a far-away lady two or three times, but Mr. Nelson (Clyde as she soon learned) always managed to tell a funny story at this point.

"I suppose you have a terrible crush on some of these six-footer high school boys," he suddenly volunteered, much to Jessie's surprise.

"Oh, that's telling," she laughed, not at all prepared to meet this question.

"But I've been all thru it," he chuckled. "I've been in love sixteen different times and never been trapped."

"Number one?" asked Jessie preparing to fall asleep.

"A silly high school affair."

She woke up here exclaiming, "But high school affairs aren't silly. They are the real thing, Mr. Nelson. Is your first sweetheart still alive?"

"Yes, indeed. She's just divorced her fourth husband."

"Oh, that's too bad," sighed Jessie, "I was going to suggest that you hunt her up, but I guess she's quite hopeless. And who was the second girl of your heart?"

"A stenographer. My first one; you know every man falls in love with the first girl who takes dictation from him!" There was a merry twinkle in his eyes and Jessie laughed at his unexpected repartee.

"But just as soon as he weds her the tables turn," snapped up Jessie, "and he takes dictation from her."

"Oh, I knew that," laughed Mr. Nelson, "and so I kept on falling in love until I reached number sixteen and then I began to get interested in my work and forgot all about girls."

He switched on the electric player-piano and since it was a fox trot they found themselves dancing. He danced "divinely," as Jessie put it, and when he suddenly pulled out his watch and exclaimed it was time for him to leave, Jessie had promised to attend a dance—a real one, not a school frat—the following week.

FINDS DOCTOR NOT GUILTY

French Jury Frees Physician Who Incorrectly Diagnosed Disease of Woman.

PARIS, (By Mail)—Is a doctor guilty of murder if his patient dies as a result of his incorrect diagnosis?

The courts at Evreaux decided that he is not guilty after a trial which attracted the attention of the medical fraternity thruout Europe.

Doctor Vallet, a prominent doctor of Evreaux, was charged with homicide by imprudence following the death of Mrs. Jouanne, upon whom he operated for tumor. During the operation Vallet and his assistants discovered that Mrs. Jouanne was not suffering from tumor, but was to become a mother within two months. The operation was necessarily continued as a Caesarian operation. The baby lived but the mother died.

During the trial Vallet proved that when Mrs. Jouanne first came to his offices he diagnosed her case as approaching maternity, but she denied it so violently that Vallet was finally forced to change his mind. He then diagnosed as tumor. Dr. Vallet pointed out that Mrs. Jouanne was a widow since 1916, and evidently deliberately denied his first diagnosis, which resulted in the incorrect diagnosis and operation.

A number of the most prominent physicians and surgeons of France testified in Vallet's favor.

SHOTS FIRED AT WITNESS

HOME OF HERRIN MAN OBJECTIVE OF BULLETS.

George Nelson Had Previously Received Threatening Letter Accompanied by Rope Tied in Hangman's Noose.

MARION, Ill., Jan. 15.—Three shots from unknown assailants were fired Saturday night at the home of George Nelson, a prosecution witness in the Herrin massacre trial, officials announced today. Nelson had received anonymous letters threatening death.

Three automobiles stopped in front of Nelson's house near midnight. They dimmed their lights and a few minutes later three shots, coming from the rear of the house, lodged in the door panels, according to Middlekant, assistant attorney general.

Nelson was one of four state witnesses who received letters threatening death unless he "returned to the courthouse at Marion and admit he lied while testifying for the prosecution."

Nelson's letter was accompanied by a strand of heavy rope, tied in a "hangman's noose."

Victims of Seaplane Accident Off Key West May Have Been Devoured by Sharks.

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 15.—The bodies of E. F. Atkins, jr., of New York city, his two sons, and Miss Grace McDonald, who were drowned when the seaplane Columbus sank off here Saturday, may never be recovered, it was believed today.

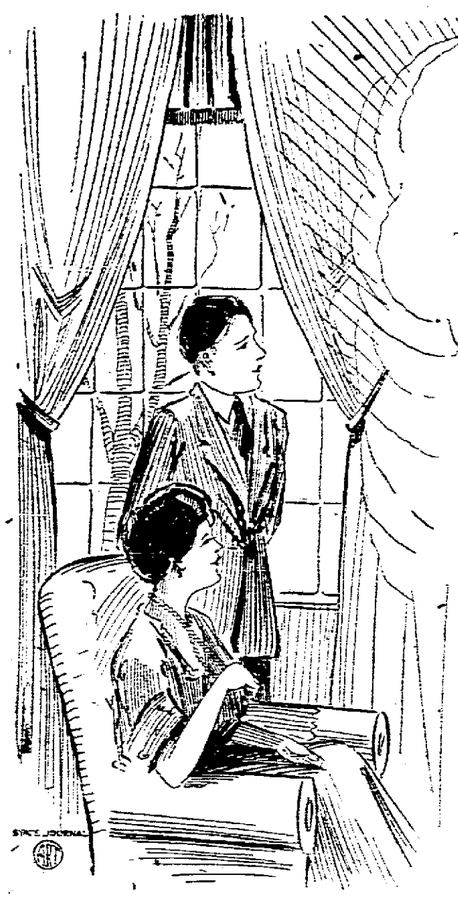

Following an all-day search by boats yesterday, marine officials expressed the belief that the bodies had been devoured by sharks which infest the waters of the Gulf of Mexico near here.

With the exception of Mrs. Atkins, all of the survivors of the disaster were reported to have suffered no ill-effects from the wreck. Mrs. Atkins, tho still confined to a hospital here, was reported to be improving.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

BOYS FIND BODY OF NEW BORN BABY BOY

Body Was Near S. Y. A. Bridge Over Salt Creek—Now in Care of County Attorney Matson for Investigation.

The body of a newly born boy was found wrapped in old newspapers on the bank of Salt Creek near the S. Y. A. bridge Sunday afternoon by two boys, Phillip Harmoney and Henry Schwindt, as they were playing nearby.

Detective Schneible, who made the investigation, believes that the infant had been there for some time, both from the date of November 11, which was found on the newspapers about the body, and from the condition of the blood stains and the body. Decomposition had hardly set in, however.

The remains are now at the county jail awaiting action by County Attorney Charles E. Matson, acting coroner. No examination by a physician has been made, but Charles Hughart, deputy sheriff, thinks from the condition of the body that the child may have been born prematurely.

The two boys were throwing stones in the water from the top of the bridge just before they made their discovery. The package which they found was heavy and one of them shook it. A string broke, something dropped out, and the amateur investigators scampered off to get assistance.

Detective Schneible has an idea that someone brought the package to the bridge in a car and threw it, perhaps when the auto was still in motion, thinking that it would drop into the stream. The officers stated that there is little to work upon in the case.

TRIBUTE TO JUDGE KINKAID

Memorial Services Held at Washington Addressed by Members from Nebraska.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(Special.)—High tributes were paid to the life and work of the late Moses P. Kinkaid this afternoon in the house of representatives. After inspiring services in memory of Representative Mann of Illinois had been concluded Former Speaker Cannon of that state delivered the speaker's gavel to Representative Andrews, Fifth Nebraska district, who in turn presided during the Kinkaid ceremonies. Representative Humphrey, new Sixth district member from Nebraska, gave a detailed biography of his predecessor's life, stating that they had first met in 1887 and that the deceased had chosen the life of a pioneer in western Nebraska, altho his personal characteristics differed greatly from those usually ascribed to the hardy pathfinder. Judge Kinkaid, he said, was an able exponent of law and order, had deep respect for individual rights and duties, and had ever evinced great interest in the home builder of the west.

Representative Evans spoke of the life of earnest, continuous and conscientious effort, the intelligent and able conceptions of government and the spirit of pioneer progressiveness demonstrated in the life of Mr. Kinkaid.

Representative Thorpe, First district member, said Judge Kinkaid's work had been so outstanding that he had lit the torch of civilization on more square miles of territory in the great west than any other man, perhaps, and that the deceased would always be remembered by the country as the father of the Kinkaid homestead act, and as a builder of homes, of cities of character and better citizenship. He served his state and nation for more than a third of a century without having one word of reproach ever cast against his name.

BULLETS FLY, MAN ESCAPES

Negro Speeds Away from Officers on North Ninth While Shots Whiz Past Him.

With bullets whizzing about his ears and half a dozen policemen after him, a negro escaped about 12:30 a. m. Monday after several blocks hard running. He was about to be searched by the officers who were looking for a negro who had been causing trouble at the Waiters' club on South Ninth, when he threw away a six-shooter, according to officers, and started to run. He scooted north on Ninth, dodged between railway cars and was last seen going east on R street. At the waiters' club, this man was reported to have used a knife during a quarrel. The other negro was cut a little on one hand. The police did not get his name.

SON ONLY CAN SEE EVELYN NESBIT

Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry Thaw, is seriously ill in Atlantic City, N. J., and only her son, Russell Thaw, now twelve, is permitted to see her. This is the first picture made of the boy in years and shows his startling resemblance to Thaw. A question of the paternity of the child, raised by Thaw, may result in a fight for the Thaw estate when the slayer of Stanford White dies.

Irrigation in Nebraska now covers 442,394 acres, with the principle projects in the western part of the state, where immense reservoirs store water for irrigation purposes, according to a bulletin of the Nebraska state department of agriculture. Almost the entire sugar beet crop and much of the potato and alfalfa crop of the state are dependent upon the irrigation waters. Along the Republican and Niobrara rivers, a number of small projects take water directly from the streams and cover, in the aggregate, quite a large area. Several projects now under consideration by the state, will increase the irrigation area about 300 per cent.

Ten little fires, none resulting in a damage of more than ten or fifteen dollars, called out the fire department Sunday morning and afternoon. All but one were roof fires, and in one or two cases, nothing more than a chimney burned out. The exception was at Eleventh and Q streets, where a hole was burned in the awning at the University Publishing company's building. The addresses on record for the other calls are, in the order in which they were turned in, 226 North Twenty-seventh, 1611 J street, 1122 North Twenty-fifth, 2903 P street, 2301 South Thirteenth, 1966 Euclid, 3224 S street, 217 South Twenty-eighth and 1937 N street.

The county fair managers association will begin its annual meeting at the Lindell hotel Monday at 2 p. m. and the meeting will continue until noon Tuesday, by which time it is expected the program will be finished. The state board of agriculture will then begin its annual meeting, finishing probably Wednesday noon. The annual dinner for fair managers will be held Tuesday evening. "There is much interest in the meetings this year," said Secretary Danielson of the state board of agriculture. "The members are drifting in early and are discussing plans for next year and what should be done. There is much interest in the meetings and in the work to be done. The meeting will be a live one."

Chaffin has been appointed as guardian of Joheph Gay, eighty year old bachelor farmer of just east of Wymore, following the resignation of Anton Schiedler, of Wymore, who has been acting in that capacity for the past year. The brothers were residents of this vicinity for the past forty-five years, and are reputed as worth around fifty thousand dollars, mostly in Gage county land. Chappin is a nephew, and has lived here many years.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Lucky, Seventy-eight, of Near Princeton, Takes Here Life Because of Suffering from Pain.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Lucky, seventy-eight, living with her daughter, Mrs. H. Steigelmeyer, a mile and a half south and a half mile east of Princeton took her own life sometime Saturday night by fastening a piece of cloth tape to the bedstead and strangling herself.

She suffered a broken hip two or three weeks ago and had been bedfast. She left a note saying: "The misery is too great, I can't stand it any longer All have been very kind to me. God bless you." The family did not learn of her act until Sunday morning when they rose for the day. It is thought that her suffering had turned her mind.

Too Much Service

The Newark Star-Eagle tells the story of a venerable tomcat which had been official rat catcher for a Turkish caliph for many years that certainly "points a moral and adorns a tale." The story runs: As old age came upon Tom and he felt his muscles stiffening he determined to make the sacred pilgrimage to Mecca before it was too late and the gates of the cat paradise were closed to him.

So he called his only son, a handsome young cat, to him and, outlining the duties of the office, placed him in charge and departed on his pilgrimage to the sacred city.

Time passed and the aged cat returned. In the street near his master's house he was amazed to encounter an emaciated cat, skin clinging to its ribs, fur gone in spots and other evidences of extreme feline poverty, beneath which guise he detected the lineaments of his once sleek son. After embracing the youth, the venerable tomcat questioned him:

"By what favor of Allah have you come to this misery, my son?"

"I am wholly at loss to account for it, father," moaned the youth. "As soon as you departed I set about the business destroying rats in the noble caliph's house, and by the end of the first week there was not a rat living. To my surprise, shortly after this the servants drove me from the house, calling me a useless beast, though I had ridden the house of all its pests. Since then I have starved."

The old tomcat shook his head:

"Alas, my son, you have made the error of youth! By all means you should have killed the rats, but not all the rats. There is such a thing in this life as too much service. Remember the words of the prophet, that perfection is for the hereafter only."

This ancient legend, so the story goes, has been adopted as a rule and guide for public service from that day to this. It is a rule and guide at the Central Hotel Cafe (1325 P street) where you will find "food and service that will please you"—food of first quality, properly cooked and served without delay and without fussiness; prompt service—but not too much.—Adv.

Is Winter Time Your Backache Time?

Does Your Back Foretell Every Change of the Weather? Do You Feel Old and Stiff and Suffer Sharp, Rheumatic Pains? Then Look to Your Kidneys!

ARE winter months your backache months? Does every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day?

Then look to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. They overload the blood with poisons and impurities that the kidneys have to filter off. The kidneys weaken under this rush of new work; become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder, then, that every cold finds you suffering with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities.

Don't wait! Delay may lead to serious or chronic kidney sickness. Realize that your kidneys have weakened in fighting the cold-created poisons and give them the help they need. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills today. Doan's have helped thousands at such times and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Lincoln Folks:

MRS. FLORENCE GEDDES.

says: "I suffered with kidney trouble after I had the flu and when I stooped my back ached so I couldn't straighten. I was so bad off at times I couldn't turn over in bed. Every time I moved, sharp pains darted through my back and I could hardly bear the pains. My kidneys acted too often. After I had used Doan's Kidney Pills the backaches left and I felt fine."

WARNING OF KLAN STUNT

WORD PASSED AROUND BEFORE DUAL MURDERS.

Merchant Testifies He Received Word From Fleming—Cyclops Sought Cloak of Parish Official.

COURTHOUSE, BASTROP, Lo., Jan. 15.—Word that the "ku klux klan is going to pull off the biggest stunt ever pulled off," was whispered around Morehouse parish two weeks before the brutal murders of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, witnesses testified in the open hearing here today.

J. H. Inabnet, merchant of Mer Rouge, testified in the probe of hooded terrorists that he received this word from A. L. Fleming, formerly of Mer Rouge.

Inabnet declaring Fleming warned him that when the stunt was "pulled" "you won't say they are bluffed."

The statement of Fleming, the witness said, followed a conversation between Inabnet, his wife and Fleming in which the witness said "it looks like the boys have got the bluff on the ku klux klan."

Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the ku klux klan, sought the cloak of a parish official under which to carry out raids, the state showed today.

Fred Carpenter, sheriff of Morehouse parish, who has been named as a member of the ku klux klan, was called as the first witness. He testified Skipwith asked to be deputized to make arrests of bootleggers and was told "all right" but never received an official commission.

The evidence was introduced to shatter Skipwith's claim that he and others were deputies when a raid was made on the home of Lon Braddock, a farmer charged with bootlegging.

Under the laws of the state this would make Skipwith open to a charge of breaking and entering homes in the night, a capital offense in Louisiana.

PASTOR ASSAILS CLERGY

Rev. Percy Stickney Grant Declares Consecration of Church Survival of Taboo.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Consecration of the church is a survival of the age of "witchcraft, magic and taboo," was the stand taken by Rev. Percy Stickney Grant today. His denunciation of theory and practices of the present day clergy has stirred New York church circles.

Dr. Grant, pastor of the famous Fifth avenue Church of the Ascension, scored the so-called "sacred" power of priests and clergymen and declared that the churches of the nation are an economic waste because they are maintained only for the clergy.

Sacredness of marriage, he said, does not come from priests, who have no power to make marriage more sacred than it is, but from the "essential characteristics" and the lives of the people involved.

The clergy, he declared is largely made up of the unintellectual who are "credulous of the miraculous power of the ministry," while educated folk and scientists do not accept miraculous consecration or sacred powers of the priesthood and cleergy.

He asserted that altho Jesus did miracles, "as they were regarded in his day," science understands them and, as Dr. Emile Coue pointed out, many of them were acts of auto-suggestion.

"They are not miracles," Dr. Grant said.

"The idea of a magic power has been perpetuated in the consecration of churches, so that consecration, strictly interpreted, has meant that something has happened to the church that cannot be explained under ordinary formulas of intelligence or action; that God dwells in the church as nowhere else except in similar churches, and that everything outside of acts of worship or similar acts which may take place in the church is blasphemous and a blow to the indwelling deity."

GREW FAT AFTER AUTO WRECK

$1,000 Damages Awarded Missouri Woman From Railroad, as Result.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 15.—"Prof. Aloysius McSwatt's class for thin people will assemble in stalled Fords along the railroad tracks north of town tonight."

Announcements such as this may result from a lawsuit just concluded in local courts, in which a woman was awarded $1,000 damages against the Chicago & Alton railroad because she put on too much weight following a collision between a switch engine and the automobile in which she was riding.

Even more than $1,000 with excess poundage was added to the fair plaintiff, Attorney Ernest Poindexter asserted in announcing intention to appeal the verdict on the grounds of insufficient damages.

His client, Poindexter alleges, gained 220 pounds as a result of the collision, and was thereby damaged at a rate in excess of the $4.54 per pound as awarded.

The value of added weight by railroad accidents, according to legal experts who watched progress of the unique case with interest, would seem to depend solely on the originally physical condition of the "smashee."

On this basis, if an exceptionally aenemic person were propelled in a graceful arc thru the heavens at some grade crossing, and immediately afterward added sufficient weight to bring him up to standard, he would have no damage case against the railroad company but the company on the other hand might have a legitimate bill against him for professional services rendered.

Meanwhile thin and fat people thruout the country will do well to watch the progress of Attorney Poindexter's appeal, and make a notation in their hat bands of the resulting establishment of precedent.

THE UNCONSCIOUS SINNER

By Hazel Deyo Batchelor

(Copyright, 1922, by The Public Ledger Company.)

Cleo Ridgefield is the type of girl who unconsciously tempts men to make love to her. When she refuses Dick Wheeler, he tries to commit suicide, and is saved by his guardian, Carey Phelps. Carey, believing Cleo to be a heartless flirt, succeeds in meeting her. He wins her heart and finally persuades her to run away and marry him. On their wedding night in order to avenge Dick, he tells her he despises her, but in his heart of hearts he realizes that he does not hate her as he should.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"I'm Going Away."

Cleo's piteous query, "Why did you marry me," forced Carey to look into his seart searching for the answer.

Why did he married her? Was it only for revenge? Wouldn't it have been possible for him to obtain as complete a revenge by simply winning her love and flinging it away? Then why had he carried his plan so far? Had it been because he did not want to give her up? Was he like all the other men this girl had charmed and had he too, fallen under her spell? The thought infuriated him.

With a single stride he spanned the distance between them, and seizing her by the shoulders forced her to look at him.

"You ask why I married you. Can't you guess? You belong to me now, you're my property, and a man may do as he likes with his own. I married you to make you pay for the past, not only with a few days of disappointed pride, but with your whole life. Think of the opportunity I'm giving you. Cleo to try your fascinating wiles on your husband. What a triumph it would be for you to bring me to your feet!" And he laughed tauntingly.

But hard on his words came Cleo's horrified answer.

"You think I would stay with you—now! You believe that I would go on with this mockery of marriage simply because of those few words in the church this afternoon?"

"Ah, but you love me, don't forget that!" His tone was full of triumph.

Did she love him? Cleo probed her own heart for the truth. Was it possible that she still cared for this man, that he still had the power to make her tremble at his touch? She shuddered away from the idea, for that would be the crowning humiliation, that would be more than she could bear.

"I did love you," she said slowly, "but I don't love you now. You couldn't say the things you have said to me tonight without killing any feeling I may have had for you."

Her eyes met his so directly and she spoke so clearly and with such assurance that a sudden fear tore at Carey's heart. Had he killed her love, was she speaking the truth? But this feeling of fear was followed immediately by anger. Why should he care whether she loved him or not?

And what difference did it make? He intended to hold her, she needn't think she could escape him now.

"And do you no longer love me!" His voice held the stillness that comes just before the storm. "And may I ask what you intend to do now?"

"I'm going away," she said quickly, "now—tonight, nothing can stop me, I never want to see you again!"

It was then that the storm broke.

With a muttered exclamation he caught her up against his breast. His arms closed around her almost savagely. He was swept away in a torrent of emotion, and back of it was that fear in his heart urging him on, that fear of losing her!

"Do you think I would let you go?" he muttered between the fierceness of his kisses, don't you know that you are mine, that nothing on earth can take you from me? Tomorrow I'm going to take you away where we can be utterly alone. I'm going to lock you up if necessary. And as for loving me, you're not the kind of woman to stop loving a man when you have once given your heart to him. Tell me you don't love me! Tell me now, I dare you to speak the words!"

But Cleo did not hear him. Her body suddenly went limp in his arms. For the second time in her life she had fainted.

SCHOOLS TEACH SOCIALISM

Yucatan System Due to Rationalist School Law in Force There.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico. — (By Mail.)—No other state in the world has educational laws as has Yucatan, the "land of topsy truvy."

Socialists of this state of Mexico who are in control of the government have established a rationalist school.

Among the features of the rationalist school law is a provision that the study of civics must not be limited to the rights of citizens, etc., but must embrace knowledge of the rules of social welfare as contained in article 123 of the Mexican constitution and also the moral idea contained in article 27 of the same constitution, "that private property must be done away with each and every time that it becomes a peril to society."

These two provisions in the federal law are the ones that are objected to by Washington.

The rationalist school law also provides that there shall not be any more religious primary schools and that priests and persons of monastic orders shall not have anything to do with teaching.

Following the passage of the rationalist school law, another act was passed in April, 1922, which provides for the reorganization of the normal schools of the state. It is an act which provides for schools "to prepare the teachers to be able to teach on the basis on which rest socialist aspirations and also to be able to teach in conformity with the rationalist law."

Provision is also made for the establishment of a "social department" for the teachers which will be a sort of laboratory "to inform the teachers about the organization of socialist parties of the world, syndicates, trade unions, labor parties, cooperatives, workers' legislation and the progress of communism in Russia."

Another article in this law provides that "under no condition must artistic education be overlooked. There must be developed in the youth profound sentiment for the beautiful, true and good."

WOMEN BULL FIGHT FANS.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico. (By Mail) —Women from the United States who are visiting in Mexico have become bullfight fans. Juan Silveti, Mexican bullfighting ace, recently was badly injured in a fight and sent to a hospital. The next day an American woman went to the hospital and presented Silveti with a beautiful bunch of flowers, expressing the hope that he would soon again be able to fight. She refused to leave her name and Silveti claims that he did not know her.

FIGHT DUEL OVER WOMAN

Cousins Armed With Razor and Revolver Kill Each Other Over Wife of One.

GRANITE CITY, Ill., Jan. 15.—With the shades drawn and the door bolted, Dick Kalosian, armed with a razor, and his cousin, Abraham Kalosian, armed with a revolver, fought a duel to death over a woman.

Mrs. Marion Kalosian, wife of Dick, over whom, police said, the men fought, was shot in the hip.

The duel resulted from alleged attentions paid Mrs. Kalosian by Abraham. The cousins quarrelled and agreed to fight it out.

Police, breaking down the door today, found both men dead. Abraham's throat was slashed and Dick's heart was pierced by a bullet.

Louis Bartlett, house painter, was awarded $250 damages in the superior court at Los Angeles against Teddy Hayes, trainer for Jack Dempsey.

ORDER WHEAT RATE PROBE

COMMISSIONERS WILL OPEN WIDE DOOR OF INVESTIGATION.

All Carriers and All Persons Interested to Appear March 2 and Throw Full Light on Present Situation.

An order was issued Monday by the state railway commission that will have the effect of throwing wide open the door of investigation of wheat rates in Nebraska. The railroads are all cited to appear on Friday, March 2 and show cause, if any there be, why an order should not issue by the commission establishing just, reasonable and non-discriminatory rates on grain in carload lots between Nebraska stations; and to present such facts as will assist in arriving at a conclusion as to the existence of violations of the interstate commerce act in connection with interstate rates on grain moving in carload lots from Nebraska stations to markets within or outside Nebraska. It also desires suggestions as to the course of action, by complaint to the interstate commerce commission or otherwise, which should be followed to correct such alleged violations.

Copies of the order have been sent to farmers' organizations, grain exchanges, chambers of commerce and the invitation will also include all shippers. The commission found, in a recent investigation of rates from ponts near Omaha that the rates on both wheat and coarse grain from stations within a radius of 100 miles from Omaha to that market are in many cases higher than the rates applying for similar distances between other stations in Nebraska.

Certain lines also maintain specific rates on grain from Nebraska stations to Omaha, subject to the alternative application of a distance scale of rates which applies as a maximum, and certain other lines maintain specific grain rates to Omaha which are not subject to the application of the distance scale as a maximum. As a result of this higher rates are applied for similar distances on one line than another under substantially similar circumstances.

Complaints have been filed with the commission alleging that rates on wheat and coarse grain from certain Nebraska stations to Omaha are higher than rates on the same commodities simultaneously maintained for equal distances from stations in Kansas and Colorado to Kansas City; and also alleging that rates on wheat and coarse grain from certain Nebraska stations to St. Louis are unjust, unreasonable and unduly discriminatory in violation of the interstate commerce act.

PLACES AMERICA THIRD

Sims Declares Washington Naval Agreement Puts Britain and Japan Ahead.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The Washington naval agreement gives Britain and Japan greater seapower than the United States, according to Rear Admiral W. S. Sims.

Speaking at Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Sims asserted that America "theoretically" ranked below Britain and Japan because those nations have guns of heavier calibre. This, he declared, nullified the 5-5-3 tonnage ratio.

Furthermore, according to Sims, the Washington agreement is unimportant because it does not control the building and arming of air fleets, which will figure largely in the next war.

At the outbreak of the war, Sims said, the orders for the American forces were to "go slow with the navy and do nothing with the army."

"If it had not been for the British grand fleet keeping the German fleet off the high seas, you Americans would be learning to speak German today," he said.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15.—Assertions by Admiral W. S. Sims that the order at the outbreak of the world war was "to go slow with the navy and do nothing with the army," were denied here today by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war.

"I never heard of any such order," Baker said. "Certainly nothing like it emanated from the war department. I do not know what Admiral Sims may have on his mind in making such a statement."

JAPS INVEST IN MANCHURIA

Railway Zone to Experience Building Boon Next Spring, Peking Reports.

PEKING — (By Mail.)—The Japanese owned South Manchuria railway zone from Darien to Chang-chun is going to experience a building boom in the spring and the activity is expected to go beyond the present bonds of Japanese influence and enter Harbin itself.

The south Manchuria railway has already arranged to spend 25,000,000 yen for new structures next year. New railway buildings, station improvements, hospitals, technical schools and experiment stations will be included in the program. This amount is entirely aside from the general program of railway improvements and extensions.

Part of the building fund will be used to erect a hotel in Harbin, this to cost 1,800,000 yens, and a hospital. The hospital is needed for the 5,000 Japanese residents of the city.

While this program is under way, the South Manchuria proposes to organize a new bank to handle the various Japanese enterprises in Manchuria.

All of which is a pretty good indication that the Tokio foreign office meant what it said when it announced that Japan had no intention of getting out of the Liaotung leased territory, or the railroad zone next year.

Texas rangers arrested Horace Boucher, Bernard Boucher, and their sister, Miss Naomi Boucher, on complaint filed by L. A. Skipworth and Ranger Capt. R. D. Shumate, charging the three with murder of his son, Grady Skipworth, November 20.

Did Your Ford Start Hard This Morning?

Spring terminal clip permits wire to be instantly detached and reconnected when motor is running. Facilitates testing spark plug and coil. No wire to be unscrewed or lost.

New electrode design forms a natural drain so that oil can lodge in spark gap

Unscrew this bushing and plug comes apart. Notice compact porcelain to withstand hard service

Patented CARBON PROOF porcelain with its high temperature fire attains sufficient heat to burn all deposits, thus offering effective resistance to carbon

Hard starting and poor performance in cold weather have always been bad enough, but these difficulties become worse each year because of fuel conditions. Spark plugs with the ordinary smooth-surface porcelain permit an accumulation of soot, particularly when the choker is used to any extent. Upon stopping the engine in cold weather the gummy deposit on the surface of the porcelain will harden, causing short circuit and making it almost impossible to start.

These troubles of hard starting and poor performance are experienced in cold weather by most motorists and particularly with old cars.

Many motorists resort to priming, but no amount of priming will start a motor in which the plugs are shorted with carbon.

With AC 1075 Carbon Proof Plugs the saw-tooth edges of the high temperature fins do not permit the carbon to accumulate over the entire surface, as these thin edges heat up rapidly and burn away the soot before it turns to carbon. This effectively breaks up short circuits, makes for easier starting and a better-running engine.

AC 1075 Carbon Proof Plugs facilitate starting and give a sweet-running motor to all Ford cars, even old ones that pump oil.

When a motor is out of tune it often happens that costly repair bills are incurred, various adjustments made, and finally it is found that new spark plugs are the remedy. Avoid this expense by first putting in a new set of AC's.

Put a set of AC 1075's in your car today. If your Ford dealer will not supply you, any other good dealer or garage will meet your needs.

The Function of a Spark Plug

is to deliver the entire spark at the gap. If part of it leaks away, due to an accumulation of carbon on the surface of the porcelain, there will be no spark or it will be so weakened that it will not properly ignite cold mixtures when starting.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

How Don Ramon Almirez Woke Memories in Dicky's Mind.

I STRAIGHTENED tensely at Dicky's query. Did he suspect Harry Underwood's identity, or was he only impressed with something vaguely familiar in the voice and appearance of the man? And what would be Harry Underwood's answer to the question?

We did not have to wait long for it. Behind his thick-lensed glasses one could feel that he was studying Dicky's face carefully, as if to recall a possible acquaintance. Then he spoke, slowly, hesitatingly.

"It is possible, although I do not remember. But I have met so many, especially when I was traveling in France and—Germany some years ago."

He halted perceptibly before the word "Germany," and at my side Dicky straightened into rigidity at the queer phrase.

That memory had suddenly brought to him a vision of that "traveling in France and—Germany some years ago," I was as sure as that I could never forget that awful time during the war—the days when for weeks I believed that Harry Underwood had saved himself at Dicky's expense. But I found out later that instead, Harry Underwood had made a voluntary sacrifice of his liberty, almost of his life for his old comrade, but the horror of that suspense had never left me.

Dicky Recognizes a Friend.

I cast a furtive glance at Dicky to see how he was taking the knowledge that the man who once had been his closest friend sat so near him. I was sure that he recognized him through his bizarre disguise, and I guessed the emotions which were swaying him.

For years they had been close friends. Then Harry Underwood, away from Lillian's restraining influence, had plunged into dissipation, and when half-crazed, almost wholly irresponsible from drink and drugs, had been an accessory in the diabolic plot of Grace Draper to cripple Dicky's airplane and send him to an awful death. When Harry Underwood had come to himself he had rushed to the flying field, and by revealing the plot, enabled the aviation authorities to have an ambulance and surgeons ready, thus saving Dicky's life by prompt treatment. A few hours later he had escaped from the military authorities, and later still, because of Lillian's influence, had been permitted to join the ambulance service in France.

An Amusing Reply.

That Dicky's old affection for Harry Underwood still persisted, I knew, and I knew also that he had great respect for the elder man's judgment. The thought of this gave me a presentiment of distinctly unpleasant hours in store for me.

Mr. Underwood had said that he meant to warn my husband about the danger for me in going about, both because of Grace Draper and of the men associated with Smith in the conspiracy which Lillian, Allen Drake and my father were watching so closely. Dicky was already so opposed to my aiding Lillian in her government work, that I knew a confirmation of his fears by Harry Underwood would make his opposition more rabid than ever.

I had but one hope, and though it was not a very creditable one, I hugged it closely. Harry Underwood had said that he meant to call Dicky to account for the escapade, from the consequences of which I had just rescued him. If he did that there were sure to be verbal fireworks, for neither man has what might be called a placid temperament, and if Dicky became sufficiently angry I knew that he would resent anything the elder man might say, and would disregard any warning he might give.

With beating pulses I waited for Dicky's reply. It did not come immediately, but when he did speak there was distinct meaning beneath the careless tone and phraseology:

"Ah! yes, I did a bit of traveling myself across the pond. Perhaps later we will be able to refresh our memories. Are you on your way to New York?"

"Fortunately, yes," the pseudo-Don Ramon replied with a rhetorical flourish. "I am a great admirer of your so beautiful city. It is the wonder of the world. I have seen many, but only one New York. Its libraries, its museums, its art galleries—ah! I have an antipathy to anything which takes me away for even an hour from its many wonders of science and beauty!"

Dicky's lips twisted again into an irrepressible grin, and I shared his patent desire to laugh outright. The pictures of Harry Underwood voluntarily spending any time in libraries, museums or art galleries when there was a theatre, or a cabaret to be found open, was irresistibly comical. And I knew that behind his thick-lensed glasses his brilliant black eyes were twinkling with mocking merriment.

MOONING :: By Juanita Hamel

ALL alone in the light of the argent moon rising clear above a pond from which ring out the sturdy voices and tinkling laughter of skaters, there sometimes sits a lonesome youth. Is it any wonder that the magic of the scene and the urge of his heart should set him mooning? Whose face would he see in the moon swinging up the heavens to smile upon him, but the face of HER he loves?

THE HOME KITCHEN

Six Delicious and Unusual Ways to Prepare Potatoes

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

WHEN the winter market for fresh vegetables is limited we must vary the cookery of those available, and since potatoes are real standbys, perhaps they offer the biggest field for culinary experiments. Ordinary potato recipes are well known, but there are some unusual ways of preparing them which are locally popular in certain sections of the country.

Potato and Onion Scallop.

Slice as many potatoes as are needed, thinly, into cold water, to stand for one hour. With a sharp knife slice one Spanish onion very thin. Chop parsley enough to make two teaspoonfuls. Butter a shallow baking-dish. Drain the potatoes dry and place a layer in the dish, then a layer of onions, sprinkle them with parsley, and dust them with pepper and salt and a teaspoonful of sugar. Dot this layer with butter, then proceed with the next layers, following the same plan, having potatoes on top. Now dot the potatoes thickly with little lumps of butter and pour in a cupful of light cream or rich milk. Cover the dish and bake the potatoes until they are soft, then uncover and brown them slightly.

Apple and Earth Apple.

Pare and boil six potatoes, and when done mash them very smooth, add pepper, salt, a good-sized lump of butter and a cupful of tart apple sauce that has been rubbed through a sieve, beat well, then heap in a buttered deep pie-plate. Sprinkle the mixture with fine crumbs and brown it quickly in the oven.

Cuban Potatoes.

Boil and mash very fine six large potatoes, add the milk of a fresh cocoanut heated with a dessertspoonful of sugar and a heaping tablespoonful of butter, beat light, and heap in little nests with a poached egg in each nest. Sprinkle each nest with grated cocoanut.

Broiled Potatoes.

Wash and boil smooth potatoes with their jackets on. When they are just done but not soft, remove, drain, cool, pare and slice them in thick slices, lengthwise. Dip each slice of potato in melted butter, dust with pepper and salt and broil on a greased broiler. When well-blistered on either side, stack on a hot plate, garnish with parsley, and serve with chops.

Potato and Chive Salad.

Boil five potatoes until they are done but not soft, drain, pare and cool them. Wipe the inside of the salad-bowl with a cut bud of garlic, dice the potatoes small, and add a half-cupful of chives cut fine and a tablespoonful of finely-minced red pepper. Make a dressing of a half-cupful of cream, a dessertspoonful of sugar, salt, pepper and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Stir this dressing until it is smooth, and then pour it over the salad and serve at once. Garnish the salad with stoned olives spread with a little anchovy paste.

Potato Crust Dumplings.

Take a heaping cupful of carefully-mashed potatoes, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and beat them very light. Sift in a cupful of flour, a half-teaspoonful of salt and four teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Work this mixture gradually to a dough with a little cold water, turn it onto a floured board, roll and shape it into hollow dumplings. Place the dumplings on a buttered pan. Fill them with a finely-minced, boiled onion seasoned and having a few crumbs and chopped nuts added. Bake, but watch closely, as the potato crust cooks quickly. Serve with a cream sauce.

WINIFRED BLACK Writes About Strange Make-Believes

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

AND now she's gone back to her family—the "courtroom sweetheart of the condemned wife-murderer."

I wonder how glad her family will be to see her? What a goose she's made of herself, to be sure.

Every day she's gone to the courtroom and there she has sat hour in and hour out, making large and languishing eyes at the wife-murderer, who was being tried for a brutal and hideous crime.

Winifred Black

She hung upon every horrible detail, and when testimony came up that made the very sheriff cringe to hear it, she only sighed sentimentally and glanced with languishing looks at the bullet-headed prisoner, who tried to pretend he didn't know she was alive.

He knew well enough.

Men of that type can see a woman who is fool enough to admire them half a mile away.

And the reporters having little to write, wrote columns about the "courtroom sweetheart." And the "courtroom sweetheart" cut out every word they wrote and carried the clippings around with her in her silly little velvet-and-tinsel handbag.

And she talked to the reporter and to the courtroom hangers-on about her "home of sorrow."

She Was Happy

And she had her picture taken—weeping—and her picture taken smiling wistfully, and her picture taken glaring reproachfully at the prosecuting attorney, and she was very, very happy.

For people were looking at her and whispering about her, and that cheered the very core of her heart.

She didn't care what they said—all she wanted was for them to speak her name.

There are thousands of persons like her in the world.

Poor, silly, insignificant little nobodies—they are aflame with an eager madness for some kind of attention!

They want to be noticed, they want to be stared at and they will do anything in the world to get attention focused upon themselves.

I knew a girl like that once, who was the terror of every young man in the village where she lived.

She used to write anonymous letters to herself and cry over them and say nobody loved her, and everybody hated her. And whenever one of the neighbors' boys went away to the city to get a job, she hinted that he had gone because she had refused to marry him, and his heart was broken and he was going away to the great wicked city—poor boy—to try to forget!

But, it wasn't till the war came that she was in her element.

What a grand time she had when the company from her home town marched away! She dressed in red, white and blue, and wore a sash with stars on it, and the very first boy who's name was sent in as among the missing—well, we all knew what "Minnie Ha-Ha, Giggling Water," as the other girls called her, would do.

And she did it. She fainted in church when the pastor mentioned the young man's name, and when they carried her out she dropped a locket with his picture in it, and afterward she told everybody that she had been secretly engaged to the young man whose name was reported as among the missing.

Just to Be Noticed!

And she wore mourning and was always weeping when anyone mentioned the war, or France, or anything that she could remotely twist into some reference to the poor fellow who was gone.

But one day he came home—safe and sound, out of a German prison camp—and who so astonished as he to hear that he had been engaged to Minnie-Ha-Ha.

But she wasn't discouraged! She said she just did it for a blind. It was another man she was engaged to really, and she wanted to fool us all.

No, she didn't mean any particular harm, but she did harm just the same, for the girl who really was in love with the Missing Boy, had a good many hours of humiliation and suspicion, and if the poor fellow had never come back, her faith in him would have been shaken.

And it is a cruel thing to shake the faith of a young girl in one who is dead.

They don't mean any special harm, these poor creatures who are so hungry for attention, but, dear me, how much more provoking they are than people who really do mean harm and do harm—and keep still about it!

Do You Realize What Little Things Mean to Charm?

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

THE very word "daintiness" to me is most attractive. It sounds clean and fresh and fragrant, and these attributes involuntarily attract.

If the word has that effect, how much more is to be said of the woman who is the personification of daintiness!

ordered, vibrant life. And we know that the person who takes the best care of herself physically must have a mind that's alert. Think how much we can see at first glance in the woman whose appearance is daintiness itself!

All of these things our insight tells us, when we observe such a lovely woman, comes under the head of charm. Now, charm has many other names. Sometimes it's called personality, and more often, I think, we hear it labelled "that elusive something."

To my way of thinking, charm isn't as elusive as some people would have us believe. It may be a delightful something we're just "born with," but in many cases I think it is not.

Of course, we don't go in to make ourselves the possessors of charm simply in the abstract sense. But what we can do is make ourselves possess many of the qualities that finally spell charm.

Daintiness is rather easily acquired. Some people naturally possess the habits that go to make personal daintiness, while others have to acquire them. But this you can do if you make up your mind to it.

Keeping your teeth in the best condition and sparklingly clean is only what you owe them, and this adds to your personal charm.

There are any number of other points. Soft, white, well-cared-for hands, sparkling, healthy eyes, graceful carriage, and a well-poised head, all have their important places.

You can't acquire them all in one day, of course, and you can't keep them without constant care. But you can concentrate on these things, and the longer you possess them the easier it will become to care for them.

You owe it to your hair to keep it fragrantly clean and well brushed, that its gloss bespeaks health and loveliness. This contributes to your personal charm.

Hair doesn't need an exorbitant amount of care. A few minutes brisk brushing at night will help wonderfully.

You can wield an orange stick and a file on your nails for a very short time each morning, and this should keep them in condition for the day. At least once a week you can find time to give them a thorough going-over. It takes only a few seconds at night to rub lotion on your hands. And so it goes.

These things become reflex action. You do them without thinking, and the habit of daintiness comes to be a part of yourself. Your charm increases by that much.

And I've found that mental alertness seems to follow more easily after physical cleanliness. Charm is mental and physical and daintiness of body helps toward a charming agility of mind.

In appearance, she must live a well-

Advice to Girls By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl 18 years old, and I am in love with a young man 21 years old. He seems to love me, and is jealous of me, and I am of him.

He works every day, and so do I. He has asked me several times to marry him, but I never did accept him.

I am the oldest girl at my home. My mother does not know anything about it, but she would not let me go with him any longer if she knew it. She doesn't want me to marry at all. Will you please give me some advice? C. W. D.

C. W. D.: Wait a little while until you are both older, my dear. Then ask your mother frankly if you can marry him. When she sees that you are really in love she is apt to remove her objections.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a woman in my 25th year, and am very much in love with a man two years older than myself. He said he loved me and asked me to marry him, but his people will not hear of it.

He wants me to marry him anyhow, but I am afraid we won't get along without his people's consent. So I went away to try to forget him, but he keeps writing and telegraphing, and I can't forget him. Any advice you give will help me greatly. HEART-BROKEN.

HEART-BROKEN: A man must decide, and this man has decided for himself. If you love each other his family's objections should not stand in the way, for you are both of age. But, of course, you should never cease striving to win the approval of his family.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

YOUR HEALTH

Why Diet Is Important In a "Mucous Colitis" Case

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Commissioner of Health, New York City

U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State

DR. COPELAND

DISEASES are like fashions. Certain ailments seem to have a degree of popularity, only to be replaced by something new.

When I was a hospital interne I used to comment on how the cases ran in groups. We would have a lot of bone cases and then a lot of cases of appendicitis and so on. Of course, this was mere coincidence, because there is no reason for the frequent appearance of any given condition unless it is a contagious or epidemic disease.

Just now mucous colitis is an ailment which seems prevalent. Perhaps it is common because of our modern forms of food, or of our modern ways of living. Whatever its cause, there appear to be many cases.

The signs of mucous colitis are not unlike common diarrhoea, except that the stool contains strips and strings of slimy mucus. There may be paroxysms of colic.

The patient is worried, restless, and may give every appearance of illness. The victim may even be a chronic invalid.

The acute attacks sometimes alternate with constipation. Indeed, chronic constipation may produce the irritation which results in the inflammation of the lining of the bowel.

The name "colitis" means inflammation of the colon—the lower bowel or large intestine.

Mucous colitis is an obstinate disease, and it does not respond readily to treatment. Since indiscretions in diet bring on acute attacks, it is important to resort to a diet which does not irritate, and which will give the inflamed tissues a chance to recover their normal qualities.

In my experience in these cases it seems very important to exclude substances irritating to the bowel. To this end, the food should be prepared in such a way as to eliminate harsh, indigestible things.

It is surprising how much material is taken into the stomach which is unchanged during its passage through the body. Much of what we call "roughage," like the fibre of vegetables, acts as a brush to clear the intestines. But if the lining membrane is inflamed and tender this brushing may be harmful.

To escape this danger, cereals, fruits, vegetables and other foods which may contain coarse material of this description should be strained. The victim of mucous colitis can eat almost any food which is prepared in this way.

Perhaps it will be a help if I suggest some things to eat. For breakfast, for instance, you might try a strained, cooked cereal, toasted bread or Holland rusks. These, by the way, are the only bread stuffs which should be taken in such a case. Stewed apples, pears and prunes, provided they are strained, may be a part of the meal. Add cream to the cereal and to the coffee substitute.

Meals should be moderate in the quantity of food eaten, and perhaps may be a little more frequent than custom prescribes. Therefore, at 10 o'clock a piece of toasted bread may be given.

The mid-day meal may begin with cream soup. This will be followed by chicken or lamb chop, macaroni and strained vegetables. Junket, rice, sago, taploca, farina or bread pudding, with cream, will supply the dessert.

At four o'clock, toast may be given, and the evening meal should be like the breakfast. At all meals limit the consumption of water and take no iced beverages of any sort.

Fresh air, lots of sleep and simple entertainment will help the cure.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, JAN. 16.

Conflicting planetary configurations make this a doubtful day. Although affairs may be lively and interesting, with a certain prospect of financial success and general expansion, yet the major malefic, Saturn, holds a position of portentous significance. It may be difficult to surmount the obstacles and postponements erected by this wieldy and hostile orb, which may make for financial loss, and assail through the deception of so-called "friends", when holding the inimical position read in this day's chart.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a fortunate year, but should be quiet, patient and persevering. A child born on this day will be talented, ambitious and studious, but may meet with many setbacks in the fulfillment of its desires unless carefully trained early in life.

By VERA WINSTON

This Dainty Dance Frock Combines Apricot Satin and Lace.

APRICOT shade is always unusual enough to be noticed among the more usual colors. When apricot satin is combined with lace to match, the effect is very lovely, indeed.

Soft apricot satin makes the straight underskirt and the looped back panel of the charming dance frock above. The lace skirt has a loop through the hips, and at the girdle is a wreath of apricot velvet flowers.

Frocks of lace and satin are very smart. All pastel tints are used, the lace being dyed to match the satin.

Good Night Stories

by Blanche Silvey

Illustrated by Nena Harrison

THE SENSIBLE LITTLE TREE-TOAD.

OH, me! Oh, me!" Old Croaker Green Frog croaked sullenly. "What a dreary, weary, old world this is! I wish I hadn't been born a frog. All I can do all day long is to sit in this boggy old place. I'm sick and tired of it all! It's a shame to have to spend one's life in a bog like this." And he croaked so mournfully that the tadpoles in the pond, thinking something wrong, all swam to the top of the water and circled around him.

"No use, children," he croaked mournfully. "For the rest of your lives all there is for you fellows is mud, mud, mud. Better stop eating and end the whole affair. That's my advice."

"I'd be ashamed of myself if I were you," snapped Mrs. Tilly Turtle. "I've lived in this same old pond just as long as you have, and never yet have you ever heard me complain, nor will you while I have that lovely blue sky and those beautiful green trees above me."

"Yes, break your back craning at the sky and the trees!" And Croaker Green Frog croaked all the more sadly. "How can one be happy sitting in this mud and mire all the time? If I were you tadpoles, I'd try and raise wings instead of feet. Then you could fly away from this old mud-hole." And he rocked from side to side and croaked so mournfully that all the tadpoles began to cry.

"You can well afford to feel sorry for yourselves," Croaker Green Frog sighed. "It's a horrid old world." And with a splash he slid under the water.

"Now, children," snapped Tilly Turtle, "if I were you, I'd keep away from that old Croaker Frog. He'll only make your lives miserable, he's so sorry for himself."

"Well," laughed one tiny tadpole, "I rather love this old pond. I love its wonderful reflections. Why, I can sit for hours and look into its depth. I never thought about looking up at the blue sky, as you call it, but I can see that is a better plan than gazing down at the mud in the bottom of the pond all the time."

"No Use, Children!"

Tilly Turtle snapped her mouth open and shut with a smacking noise. She always did that when she had a new thought. Then she came around and looked carefully at the little tadpole who had just spoken.

"I know," she chuckled merrily, "why you've noticed the reflections. It's because you're not a green frog at all. You're a tree-toad."

All the tadpoles gathered around Tilly Turtle and crowded close to their little friend. They sized him up and down, and then compared themselves with his little body. Sure enough, the whole lot of them looked just the same, and they all laughed merrily.

"You're every one of you tree-toads," laughed Tilly Turtle. Every tadpole in the bunch had lost his tail, and had in its place four lovely feet.

Tilly Turtle took them in charge, led them up above the water on the bank, and let them gaze at the beautiful blue sky.

"There are some folks who are happier looking at mud-holes than at the sky. But don't you be that way. Look up and not down, and you'll always see beauty." And away she went back to the pond."

The little tree-toads climbed into the trees. There you'll find them as happy as can be. They love the blue sky. That's why they make such good weather prophets.

KEYS FOR MIDNIGHT PARTIES

Evidence of Intruders in Platte Courthouse.

COLUMBUS, Neb., Jan. 15.—Some time ago two complete sets of keys to the Platte County court house disappeared from Chairman Hobbensteifken.

Nothing had been heard of the keys until a few weeks ago when evidence of "petting" episodes were found in different rooms about the court house. Janitors about the court house say that they have found unquestionable evidence of midnight parties by Columbus young people whose identities are said to be known. Janitors before leaving the building every evening have been in the habit of placing things in order and see to it that all doors are locked. Many times in the morning the janitors declare they have come to work and found what little furniture there is in the community room strewn with ashes and cigaret stubs and frequently an empty whisky bottle or two.

The county dads are under the opinion that the missing keys solve the problem now confronting them. "Find the keys and we will find the petters," said one. "Yes, find the petters and we will find the keys," another one declares.

HARD FALL FAILS TO INJURE

Crawls Back Into Wreckage of Car and Resists Officers.

OMAHA, Neb, Jan. 15.—"Go away, I'm at home," protested H. W. Johnson, a carpenter, when police shook him to ascertain whether or not he was dead after he and a companion had hurtled over a thirty-five-foot embankment on Pine street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

The automobile in which Johnson, 3703 North Thirty-ninth street, and Oscar Preston, 851 South Twenty-first street, were driving, turned over several times en route to the bottom of the ravine, but landed in an upright position, police reported.

Preston, only slightly bruised, fled from the scene and was captured several blocks away on Fourteenth street. He was still running.

Johnson, who was thrown from the car, lay as tho dead, but when police arrived he had clambered into the machine again and remonstrated vigorously with the officers for disturbing him, they said.

Both men were arrested, Johnson charged with being drunk and reckless driving, and Preston with being drunk.

JACK CLIFFORD'S ILL-FATED PARTY TAKES TOLL; TONY MARSH FATHERLESS

ALBERT JOHNSON, PEGGY MARSH AND HER SON HENRY MARSH.

NEW YORK—Jack Clifford's now famous party at his Adirondacks camp last September, attended by Clifford and his wife, Evelyn Nesbit, and Peggy Marsh and her husband, Albert L. "Bud" Johnson,—seems to have been an ill-fated affair all around.

It was at this party that Jonnson was mysteriously shot, in a manner which all members of the party swore was accidental. Police were not satisfied, however, and conducted two investigations which came to naught.

Of all those present at the party, however, young Johnson is dead of pneumonia complicated by the effects of the bullet wound; his wife, Peggy Marsh, in London with her son, Tony Marsh claimed to be the son of the late Henry Field, where she went after the "party" because of a sudden, unexplained estrangement with her husband.

And Evelyn Nesbit, after various ups and downs as an amateur restaurateur, during which she attempted suicide, is near death from pneumonia at the hospital.

The maximum penalty for this offense is five years. Mr Kotas told of returning from service in the army and finding the bank in bad condition and of converting the bonds in an effort to float the bank across the shoals, with the intention of making everything right with the return of prosperity. The bank was closed by the state last year, and both Adolph and Emil Kotas tried in the state courts for violations of banking laws.

With Mr. Kotas was indicted F. R. Ward, formerly an officer in the bank, who is now doing time at Lancaster.

DRY LAW SUCCESS BISHOP DECLARES

President of Anti-Saloon League Predicts a Dry United States When Facts Are Brought Before People.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Prohibition is a success, Bishop Thomas Nicholson, president of the Anti-Saloon league, declared today on the eve of the third anniversary of enforcement of the eighteenth amendment. He predicted a dry United States as soon "as the facts can be brought before the people."

"The success of prohibition is incontrovertible as shown by reports from all parts of the country," the bishop said. "Anti-dry propaganda will reach its peak during the 1924 campaign and then recede.

"Attempts of the wets to modify the law at state elections last year were overwhelmingly defeated.

"Committee after committee from Australia, England and other European countries went from city to city studying the effects of prohibition. Every one of them reported that the success of the law even with its handicaps, was remarkable.

"Our problem is one of educating people in a fair manner and laying before them the real facts.

"During the next three years strides for enforcement will be rapid. The eighteenth amendment will not be repealed. No legislation permitting beers and light wines will be passed. State, city and county officials will be forced to resign or enforce the law. Smuggling into the United States from other countries will be reduced to a minimum by international agreements which will place smugglers on the same plane as pirates.

"Prohibition is here to stay as the permanent policy of the United States of America."

NO INQUEST OVER BABY

Sheriff Claude Hensel said Monday morning that there probably will be no inquest over the death of the new born baby boy whose body was found near the S. Y. A. bridge over Salt Creek Sunday afternoon by two small boys, Phillip Harmoney and Henry Schwindt.

There was a report to the sheriff's office to the effect that the child may have been born prematurely. County Attorney Charles E Matson has made no definite decision as to whether there shall be an inquest, but Mr. Hensel said he could not see where an inquest would disclose any facts not known.

No clues have been discovered which will lead to the identity of the infant's parents. Mr. Hensel said the body will be turned over to an undertaker.

OBERLIES CLASS DISCUSSION.

The indeterminate sentence came in for a hearing at the Oberlies mens class Sunday. The law in detail was first explained and much interest was shown in its conditions, of many of which the class was in ignorance. It was stated that the average man is opposed to the law as it now stands. This aversion is based probably upon the unfortunate conduct of the 11 per cent who have failed to make good among paroled convicts. It was declared that we forget that there is 89 per cent who are not apprehende again, and the presumption is that most of these at least make good. One said that all crime is committed by released convicts, but one impudent chap in the back row then asked how crime could have started in the first place.

The criminal was called a morally sick man, and should be sent to prison as an invalid is sent to the hospital. His term in the "hospital" should therefore be indeterminate.

WANTS GRADING LAW KILLED

Alliance Man Urges Legislature to Repeal Potato Inspection Statute Now On.

O. K. Dye of Alliance has written an open letter to the legislators in which he urges the repeal of the potato grading law passed at the last session. He says this is the only state that has a law compelling grading. Mr. Dye says that the law as it stands is more favorable to the buyer than to the grower, and is used by unscrupulous buyers as a shield when they do not desire to be bound by the obligations of their contracts.

Mr. Dye says that representatives of the state department of agriculture consulted buyers and asked them if the inspectors were satisfactory to them, but no grower was ever consulted. He pointed out several instances where inspectors granted certificates without looking at the tubers. He says so far as inspection is concerned it is a fraud; that excessive fees have been demanded; that it leads to favoritism, and there is no appeal from the inspector's decision. He says that where it happens only small potatoes are grown the crop is a total loss, because he cannot go on the market and sell them on their merits.

RECOUNT AGAIN DELAYED

Attorneys for Both the Contestant and Contestee Were Unavoidably Delayed.

The recount of ballots to determine whether the people of Lancaster county wanted Charles E. Matson or Wade A. Wilson for county attorney, was again delayed when attorneys explained that they could not appear in court Monday. The recount was to have started Monday morning in county court.

Mr. Matson's attorney had to be in Beloit, Kas., to take part in a lawsuit. Mr. Wilson's lawyer had to appear in federal court in a case that could not be delayed.

County Judge Robin R. Reid postponed the recount until Wednesday morning.

MINIMUM WAGE FOR WOMEN

Bill Again Makes Its Appearance in House by Way of the Labor Committee.

Among the new bills introduced at the Monday afternoon session of the house was a minimum wage bill, from the committee on labor. This provides that not less than $12 a week shall be paid to women engaged in business and industry, and where they are employed by the hour, not less than 35 cents an hour.

When Jerry Howard was wont to champion this bill in past sessions, he says he was met with the claim that it was unconstitutional. He thereupon had himself elected to the constitutional convention, and had authority for such a bill made a part of the new constitution.

A fashionably gowned audience of elderly and middle aged women yesterday attended the first public lecture given by Emile Coue, and enjoyed the experience.

SCHOOL BOARD FOR INCREASE

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND ABOVE LEGISLATIVE GRANT.

Board Suggests Fifteen Mill Levy or Boost of Nearly Two Mills—Delegation Said to Be Somewhat Divided.

The Lincoln board of education in a budget submitted to members of the Lancaster delegation in the legislature suggests an increase of $200,000 a year over the legislative grant of two years ago which provided for a limit of $1,200,000 per year. The board presumably desires to go back to the mill levy basis in place of the maximum sum. Under the present arrangement, the amount fixed as a maximum is the equivalent of a levy of 13.26 mills on a valuation of $90,542,855. The board would ask an increase to 15 mills under present methods or 75 mills under former methods. Following is the budget for the ensuing year as proposed by the board and submitted to the Lancaster delegation:

Bond interest fund	$ 100,000
Bond liquidation	50,000
Building fund	100,000
General fund	1,150,000
Total	1,400,000

The board indicates that the $1,200,000 per year limitation by general tax is inadequate. The delegation met with the board shortly before the legislature convened to informally discuss the matter. It is understood that the board figures on going before the people in the near future with a proposed bond issue of $2,000,000 for new buildings.

J. Reid Green, only member of the delegation of two years ago which fixed the flat sum limitation, expects to stand pat. He said that the question was thoroly thrashed out in 1921. His pre-election litearture sets forth his stand.

"The Lancaster delegation at the last legislative session felt that the school appropriation must be reduced to a flat $1,200,000 annually whereas the 1920 tax levy amounted to $1,557,333. This made a net saving on the 1921 reduced assessed valuation of $241,950. This was done, we believe, without injury to the efficiency of our schools and allowed for the increased teachers' salaries voted by the people. I am opposed to further increase by the legislature as I believe it should be now left to the voters."

The budgetary showing of the board indicates an increase in school population in the Lincoln schools for 1922-1923 of 387 over the population of 1921-1922. Of the $200,000 increase which the board requests, all but $50,000 is to care for expense fixed by the voters of the district according to the board's statement. Such expenses the board has been unable to handle under the present income. An increase in the levy to 15 mills will produce upon the current valuation the sum of $1,358,142,825.

It is understood that certain members of the Lancaster delegation are willing to be shown that $1,200,000 a year is inadequate. Their position is that the board should have funds reasonably necessary to operate and maintain the schools without treatment of any building program which, it is generally conceded, should be submitted to the people. The advantage of the mill levy is that it permits an increased revenue in keeping with the growth of the community and the growth of the schools and does away with the necessity of appearing the garb of beggar before the legislature.

Representative Green is not opposed to submitting to the people the proposition of the maximum sum versus the fifteen mill levy.

DEMAND BY STOCKGROWERS

Good Has Bill for Inspection of the Ownership of Livestock Moved From One County to Another.

Senator James W. Good of Chadron has prepared a bill to meet the request of the Nebraska livestock growers association for inspection of livestock removed from one county to another. The present law covers inspection of live stock shipped by rail, but the new bill adds removal of stock not shipped by rail. The association believes the bill will protect owners from theft.

Senator Good proposes to give county boards optional power to appoint livestock inspectors who shall be paid a fee of 4 cents a head on cattle and 10 cents a head on horses, together with mileage. He would require persons who remove livestock to ask permission and to receive a certificate of authority from the inspector. Publication of the permission with a description of brands for two weeks is required. For violation of the act the proposed penalty is a fine of $500 or one year in jail, or both.

This bill under title of S. F. No. 50 will be introduced Tuesday afternoon when the senate convenes.

S. F. 51 by Good is a new bill to give the state department of agriculture further control over commission merchants who sell farm products. It does not apply to auctioneers. It prohibits price fixing by commissioner merchants. A license must be procured from the department of agriculture at a cost of $10 and a bond must be given to protect customers. The bond ranges from $2,000 to $4,000. The department is authorized to revoke licenses granted. The bill covers the sale of all farm products, including fruit, vegetables, poultry and eggs.

Miss Stiers was injured Sunday afternoon while with a hunting party south of Sprague when a shotgun was accidentally discharged. She was rushed to St. Elizabeth's hospital where an operation was performed.

CHAPPELL SPEED CLASS SWELLS

Student Traffic Violator Given Quizz by Police Judge.

A quartet of speeders pleaded guilty Monday morning before Police Judge Chappell and were each fined $10 and costs and listed as first offenders. Those fined include Harry Ozenbaugh, 3145 South Eleventh; L. W. Kline, 2513 South Thirteenth, and F. L. Riley, 519 South Eighteenth. Gilbert Scribner, 121 South Seventeenth, was fined $10 and costs when he pleaded guilty to cutting corners and speeding.

K. Austin, student, 1000 L, pleaded guilty before Judge Chappell to parking a car in an alley between P and Q street. He was dismissed on condition that he obtains a copy of the city traffic ordinances and appears before Judge Chappell Tuesday for a quizz on them.

H. W. Wood, 2828 N, appeared on a charge of violating a parking ordinance. He contends that his machine was moved by a coal hauler. The case was continued until 9 a. m. Tuesday in order to secure witnesses.

AUTOMOBILE IS DEFENDANT

Henry Mackey's Car to Be Forfeited Unless He Can Prove It Shouldn't Be.

The Columbia automobile in which Henry Mackey was transporting hooch when he was arrested last July is made the defendant in a libel of information filed Monday in federal district court, asking that the car be forfeited to the government and sold. Mr. Mackey pleaded guilty October 7 to illegal transportation of liquor, and was fined $200. The car was seized by Prohibition Agent Tom Carroll and is now in his possession.

A court order pursuant to the information directs the marshall to seize the car, and sets February 16 as a date for all persons interested to appear and show cause why the car should not be forfeited and sold. This is the second instance in this division where an automobile has been made defendant, Earl Gibbons' car having been subject to the same procedure some months ago.

TO PROPOSE REPEAL OF INSOLVENCY ACT

Present Law Permitting Payment of Indebtedness Thru County Clerk Good in Theory But Not Practical.

A bill to repeal the present county court insolvency act probably will be introduced in the house by Representative Ralph P. Wilson of the Lancaster delegation. The law is sound in theory but impractical, acocrding to this member.

"But a few persons have filed under the provisions of the act and I doubt if one person has gone thru with it and completed the process of paying his debts," he said.

Mr. Wilson, after a careful investigation, has discovered that the law is workable up to a certain point. The court makes out the order of payment but the debtor soon fails to appear with his payments.

When one goes thru federal bankruptcy, he draws a discharge. His slate is clean and he may start over. Under the county court insolvency act, the debts run along until they are wiped away. The debtor agrees to pay so much a month into court, this sum to be prorated among the several creditors.

Representative Wilson also proposes to introduce a bill to clarify the graduated provisions of the inheritance tax act.

TRACK ORDINANCE PENDING

Council Expected to Give Railroad Permission But Action May Be Delayed.

While the ordinance now pending before the city council giving the Missouri Pacific railroad a merchandising track in the alley between Ninth and Tenth and R and S streets is expected to pass at the meeting Monday afternoon, there may be reasons for postponing this until a week later. Protesting property owners have asked the council to kill the ordinance on the plea that it will damage their property. They will be present and present objections. Several property owners in favor of the proposed trackage want the ordinance passed on the ground that it will give more trackage to the wholesale and manufacturing district and also make their holdings more valuable. One property owner is ready to build a big warehouse for a jobbing concern if his building gets trackage. He told the council that he will tear down the old barn on R street, which he owns, and build for the occupation of a reliable jobbing or manufacturing concern. The chamber of commerce is interested.

Woods Brothers company submitted a plat of their new addition Country Club Park, and asked that the council approve of it. A plat of the park is attached to the application. It contains one hundred and seventy-one lots. A resolution approving of a contract with the Union Pacific railroad for the construction and maintenance of a big drainage ditch under the tracks of its Beatrice branch line was submitted for passage.

The council will refuse the request of a firm of attorneys to institute suit against the W. J. Assenmacher Construction company for damages alleged to have been sustained by one John Thompson when the latter was hurt at the A street pumping station. Mr. Thompson was an employe of the Assenmacher company at the time he was hurt in June.

Deputy City Attorney Wilke advised a settlement of a claim of A. B. Kinman against the city of $50 growing out of a collision of the Kinman automobile October 29 with some iron sewer pipe at Twentieth and P streets. The pipe was owned by the city.

CRANKED CAR WHILE IN GEAR

F. B. Morrell Has Limbs Severely Bruised When It Starts.

F. B. Morrell, 341 South Nineteenth street, a vocational student at the state university, had his limbs severely bruised when he cranked his car while it was in gear at Tenth and R streets at noon Monday. The car started and crushed him against another car standing near by. He was taken to his home where he was attended by Dr. W. H. Slattery. The physician says his injuries are not dangerous. Mr. Morrell was wounded in the world war.

RETAILERS HEAR OF COMMUNITY CHEST

Allen Field Explains Both Sides of the Proposed Method of Economy in Social Work.

How the community chest works in cities of the same size and type as Lincoln, and how objections to it have been met, were explained by Allen W. Field before the retail trade promotion subdivision Monday at the chamber of commerce. The retailers had already gone on record in favor of the plan, and Mr. Field's talk was intended to give a clearer grasp of the details.

In Rochester, N. Y., for example, the first community budget was oversubscribed, and 90 per cent of the families in the city contributed. Substantially the same report came from Erie, Pa., and from a number of other cities. Everywhere the plan was greatly favored because it substituted one campaign for ten or a dozen, and saved an untold amount of work, postage and time.

One of the most frequent objections to the plan, Mr. Field said, was that organizations might lose their identity when the money for all was collected at once. This plea came usually from the larger and better established organizations, such as have the least trouble to raise their budgets. As a matter of fact, the practice of letting contributors designate the organizations they must wished to help, overcame this objection, Mr. Field said. He quoted W. A. Luke of the Y. M. C. A. as favoring the community chest because it would take much of the burden off the small group of public spirited citizens who were saddled with the responsibility of many of the drives, and would enable the money to be collected and distributed thru one office instead of many.

Preceding this address, the retailers chose A. H. Ashley to be chairman of the spring and fall opening night committee in place of C. H. Hathaway, who is leaving Lincoln. Mr. Ashley conceived the first display, in the fall of 1921, and was chairman on that occasion and in the spring of 1922.

WOMAN IS STRUCK BY AUTO

Flora B. Clay Suffers Scalp Wound When Knocked to Pavement Monday.

Flora B. Clay, about fifty-five years old, 1732 J, was struck and knocked to the pavement by an auto at Tenth and P streets at 10:45 a. m. Monday. She was taken to the Lincoln sanitarium where it was discovered that she had a bad gash on the head in which several stitches were taken.

According to doctors at the sanitarium she is not fatally injured. The auto was driven by John Ricker, 616 North Sixteenth.

Mr. Ricker who was driving a Buick car says his speed was not more than ten miles an hour. Mrs. Clay was going east on the south side of P street and the automobile was headed south on Tenth.

Success of Basketball Team Depends Almost Entirely on Offensive Strength

HOW TO PLAY BASKETBALL

Individual and Team Methods for Advancing the Ball—When to Dribble and How to "Freeze" the Ball—Suggestions for Breaking Thru Strong Opposition.
NO. 1—PLAYING THE OFFENSE.

By Nat Holman.

A basketball team's success depends almost entirely upon the strength of its offense. Regardless how good a defense it may have, if a team hasn't the ability to score baskets, it cannot win games Likewise in baseball a team may have a wonderful battery and an excellent defense, but if it cannot score runs, before long it will be a tailender in the race True, there are basketball games that are frequently won when players have exceptional luck at shooting baskets from all parts of the floor, but those occasions are rare

The team that can by its team work get the ball down the floor to within good shooting dsitance is one that will head the percentage column There are many different styles of offense in basketball, yet if a close analysis of all these were taken the same fundamental underlying principles will be found

Possession a Big Factor.

Possession of the ball is almost nine-tenths of a basketball game, and the sooner the ball is obtained the better. Much naturally depends upon the centre's ability to out-tap his opponent and a good deal also on the ability of the forwards to come in and take possession of the ball

The second big factor is the speed with which the offense is started It must be fast and under way before the opposing team has a chance to get set and to size up the situation. No matter whether the ball is started on an out of bound play from the opponents' backboard or from the center, the play should be fast. Great basketball teams fairly sweep their opponents from the floor with the speed which they carry into their play. There is no excuse for a team wasting time after it secures possession of the ball To get it down the floor to within shooting distance is their object and there should be no time wasted

By getting the ball down the court quickly, I do not mean that the men should go down the floor on a wild dash. When players work that way, it is not long before they lose possession of the ball They are likely to be caught with no one in the back court and be scored on When a team takes possession of the ball, let it get moving, passing the ball to one another speedily and accurately, criss-crossing in order to make openings. Should any man cut loose and make a dash for the basket, his teammates should be ready, if they have the ball, to feed him with an accurate pass

It is a common discouraging to player to cut for the basket with a three-yard lead on his man while the men on his team fail to feed him. Nothing is more discouraging to a player than to draw away from his man, and, to his chagrin, find one of his own mates holding onto the ball in the backfield. It is not always the fault, however, of the man with the ball for not feeding him. When a player does break away, it is his business to yell as loud as he can. I can picture Johnny Beckman who, as a member of the Original Celtics, is rated as one of the greatest forwards in the game, cutting away from his man and yelling at the top of his voice while his right hand was raised to attract attention. No man on the Celtic team or any other team that Johnny has played with would overlook him when he cut for the basket. The fans used to mimic his cry, but the comments of the spectators never bothered Beckman. It is the business of the man with the ball to be ever on the alert to feed a man cutting in. But a sudden cry will help him to determine immediately just what he should do with the ball.

One of the most important things in basketball offense is for players to break and run at the proper time. When the ball is moving about they ought to glance thru the corners of their eyes to see whether the opportunity presents itself for them to cut for the basket. The trouble with a great number of men is that they have their eyes on the ball all the time. That may be a good thing, but men will never get away if they haven't the thought in their minds of cutting in.

Play Back of Opponent.

If a player finds that his opponent is playing him closely, let him back up about two to three yards. If he maneuvers about with his opponent sticking closely to him, he may not be able to outsprint him when he makes a dash for the basket. On the other hand, if he backs up about three yards as suggested and then starts on a run, with a rapid feint to the right or left, his opponent will have to be a very fast man to intercept the play. The theory is this: When a man is started on a run the man playing him is standing still. The former has the start or the getaway and that is all that is necessary to make a basket without being blocked or charged.

In coaching City College basketball team I have termed the above play the "Give and Go." In practice the men enjoyed backing away from their opponents and making a sudden break for the basket, with a rapid left-right feint If they found their opponents fleetfooted enough to cover them, they would come to a sudden halt, shoot to the side of the court to go and meet the ball or to be ready for any other situation that presented itself.

A Tricky Player.

Shifting and feinting play a very important part on the offense. A player who can outguess or shift away from his opponent is to the type of man that must be watched closely. I refer again to Dr. Lou Sugarman, who was one of the hardestmen to contend with in this respect He had the most unusual way of weaving his way thru the defense From the way he carried himself one might have thought he was studying shadows, for he kept his head bent toward the ground watching his opponents' feet "He certainly knows how to pick holes," was a common expression from the enthusiastic fans One never knew how to figure Lou He would back away from his man and suddenly make a dash for the basket with a rapid left-right or right-left [illegible] He feinted so well to the left [illegible] his opponent would draw over to [illegible] side in the hope of stopping him and much to his surprise, Lou continued the feint to the right.

To fool his man on the next play, Lou would come down the floor with his left-right feint and suddenly use a right-left feint In baseball, this may be likened to what the pitcher calls "mixing them up," or outguessing his opponent There were times when I saw Dr. Sugarman use a triple feint. He would give himself enough room to execute the feint and then come down the floor speedily, with a right-left-right feint This movement down to his foul line and turn with was all done from the hips up, as he swayed his trunk with great rapidity right-left-right.

BASKETBALL SERIES WILL COVER EVERY FEATURE OF GAME

This is the first article of a series by Nat Holman, world's greatest basketball player. Following articles will cover every department of the game, defense, passing, goal shooting, winning plays, how to play individual positions, tips to players and coaches and how to train for the strenuous game

There are many thousands of basketball players in Nebraska especially in the public schools. Holman's series is the first of its kind to appear in newspapers and the instructive value of the articles, with pictures and diagrams will prove as beneficial as the services of a private coach.

Segrist Has 27 Players Signed

George Segrist, owner of the Fairbury state league club, is in Lincoln for a few days Naturally, the question he is called upon to answer is whether he will have a club at Sioux City, Ia., next season. And the answer to that question is not possible—yet. The Sioux City Western league club is still being offered but there are no takers. Therefore the Sioux City territory still belongs to Chick Mattick, et al.

Segrist sold eight players during and after the last season But he has twenty-seven signed to report this spring. He has five veterans around which to re-construct his team. The quintet now on his reserve list includes Wimbush, Bliss, Jenney, Ferry and Willey.

COPELAND TO MANAGE CLUB

Directors Place Country Club Affairs in Hands of a Well Known Member.

A large number of people visited the new grounds of the Lincoln country club Sunday and toke note of the work on the new building. The plastering is now completed on two thirds of the place and the finishing will soon be in place The inspectors expressed much pleasure over the quality of the work and the convenience and commodiousness of the new structure.

While the golf course has not been opened as yet, a number of players were trying it out during the day, the pleasant weather making them feel that it would be a shame to waste a whole day without tickling the balls a trifle.

The directors of the club have decided to put the plant under the general management of C. B Copeland, who has had much experience in promoting club tournaments, and in helping to operate the various club activities as chairman of committees and director He will be given such clerical assistance as he needs, and will be in charge of the house and the grounds

The directors have also adopted the amended rules which permit members to introduce during each season twenty men living in Lincoln provided no individual may be brought to the grounds more than four times in a season and no more than once in a single month. The old rule permitting two ladies residing in Lincoln to be brought to the club by a member at any time he chooses remains in effect.

Ned Hanlon Starts a Revolution in Baseball—How Jennings Improved His Batting Average—Invention of the "Hit and Run" Play—New Blood for the Orioles.

When we showed up at New Orleans in the spring of 1893 for training I got an inkling of what Ned Hanlon was trying to do in the way of building up a ball club. It was very clear to me that he was seeking youth and spirit. Up to that time—and that is often true today—baseball people hesitated to try anything new. Veterans can be counted on to do the right thing—at any rate, the usual thing—and there is a tendency to let them go along But managers, in this sense of security, go too far. They do not realize that the old-timers are slipping; do not see the necessity of young blood soon enough In other words, it is a human failing to follow the line of least resistance. The work of building is tedious and nerve-racking. To avoid it is human.

Ned Hanlon evidently had made up his mind to get rid of all these old ideas and spring something entirely new on the big league. He had been impressed by the eagerness and ambition of kids like Jennings and myself.

Joe Kelley There.

So, when we arrived at New Orleans we found another young fellow—Joe Kelley. Joe had come to Baltimore in exchange for George Van Haltren, the deposed leader of the Orioles. Joe was a wonderful outfielder, was fast and could hit. Like Jennings and myself, he also thought and dreamed baseball.

The first day of practice Jennings walked up to the plate, stepped into the ball and smacked it for a single. Hanlon was surprised to see that he did not pull away from the plate, as had been his failing the year before. We had corrected that fault during the winter at St. Bonaventure college.

Jennings had hit but little over .200, but had been retained on account of his wonderful fielding. He had the bad habit of pulling away with his forward foot when swinging at the ball. In baseball we call that putting one's foot in the water bucket, the idea being that a player will pull so far away as to step to the bench That pull away naturally draws the bat so far from the plate that it is practically impossible to meet the ball squarely. We talked this over for hours Finally I hit on a scheme that Jennings agreed to try.

Practiced at College.

In the college cage I placed Jennings up against the screen so that it was impossible for him to pull away in that direction For hours I pitched to him Being unable to back away he had to step into the ball. The foot, instead of going off to one side, would step directly forward This was very awkward at first. For a long time it looked as if he could not get away with the scheme. But Hughey and I were both determined After a week of this he found himself stepping into the ball instead of away from

This practice wrought such a change in his hitting that the next season he [illegible] as against the former .200 [illegible] to facing the ball this change in the direction of the step enables the batter to hit the ball in front of the plate. He can thus meet the ball before it breaks. In other words he is on top of the ball instead of the ball being on top of him

In those days we practiced the [illegible] at the ball instead of the [illegible] Of course we did not hit so many home runs by that [illegible] but we got many more base hits and consequently won [illegible] games.

Not Good For Team

[illegible] connection it is my belief that the present epidemic of home runs is due to the fact that most of the batters are trying to hit home runs instead of trying to hit the ball scientifically That may be all right for a few hard swingers, but it is not good for a team as a whole Of course, the lively ball helps a lot. but the increase in home run hitting, I believe, is largely due to the fact that batters are catching their bats on the end and swinging from their shoestrings. They are trying to hit home runs, instead of merely trying to hit safe. They will either knock the ball out of the lot or strike out. In our early days we worked on the theory of meeting the ball and shoving the runner around. That, I still think the best system

Awhile back, you will recall, I told of having fined Sammy Strang $25 for hitting a home run when I had instructed him to bunt the ball. That is an example of the difference in methods Today if Sammy had hit that home run he would have been a great hero. I might have fallen for the glamor of it myself, because everybody seems to be running to the long swing style of hitting nowadays. Still, I would never stand for any ballplayer disobeying instructions, even tho it won a game.

That season we had as a battery Wilbert Robinson, one of the greatest catchers that ever lived, and John McMahon, better known as "Sadie" McMahon, as pitcher. We have never had many better pitchers than McMahon. In addition to being a great pitcher he was a great judge of ball players and a close student of the game.

Found George Burns.

It was Sadie McMahon, by the way, who discovered George Burns, the outfielder. I had engaged McMahon as scout for the Giants. Te went out with the intention of getting a good ballplayer or nothing.

"I may not find a good one," he said to me; "but I won't dig up any bad ones. It's my idea that too much money and time are wasted on ball players just for the sake of trying them out."

McMahon scouted all season, and I heard little or nothing from him.

"Mac," he said on his return, "I have covered the whole United States and I have found but one ballplayer who looks good. I'll bet on him"

This man was George Burns, and the fans of the country know enough about this great outfielder to appreciate McMahon's judgment. He more than earned his year's salary by digging up that one player.

Wilbert Robinson had his heart and soul in baseball, and he chimed right in with the ambitions of Jennings, Kelley and myself. Tho he was older, he was just as young in spirit. Working with him and McMahon, we [illegible] up many new plays and schemes for advancing base runners We really gave the hit and run play its first good start

The "Hit and Run."

To work the hit and run play successfully it is necessary that the batters be adept in placing the ball. I imagine that most every fan understands the principles of this play The main idea is, if there be a runner on first, to signal him to start for second as if to steal a base At the same moment the batter swings at the next ball whether it be a good one or not. Having watched the opponents he has a pretty good idea as to whether the second baseman or the shortstop will cover second base

If the second baseman starts to cover the bag it is the batter's cue to smack the ball between first and second—thru the spot left vacant by the second baseman If the shortstop is to cover, the hit is shifted to the other side of the diamond. Now it takes good batters to do that.

We worked this play very successfully several times Hanlon, seeing the possibilities of a whole team of such ambitious players, began figuring for other new players.

Anyone with half an eye to the future could see the gradual making of a great championship team. Tho we did not know it he already had put out feelers for additional talent.

Win or Nothing.

Even with the small nucleus that we had we developed a fighting policy. We learned how to slide accurately and went into them all, determined to win. Never did we play for a tie. We wanted a victory or nothing. I have never believed in playing for a tie. For instance, if there is a runner on second and we need a run to tie I always call for a hit instead of a sacrifice. One run would merely tie the score. A long hit might bring the one run and start another. The main idea is to win. An effort to merely tie we always considered a sign of weakness.

Aggressiveness is the main thing in baseball. That is what we were aiming at. Hanlon added to our wallop by a series of big trades. This move on his part started something.

BASEBALL DIRECTORS RESIGN AT BEATRICE

New Manager Expected for the State League Team This Season and Drive for Funds Will Be Started Soon.

BEATRICE, Neb., Jan. 14.—Ray Hamilton, Charles Segelke, Drew Jamieson and Lev Ashenfelter, directors of the Beatrice state baseball team have announced their resignation, stating that they are definitely out of it. President Harley Heffelfinger and Director A. Ransdall are expected to stay on the job for the present at least.

It is believed that the action of the four directors will result in a new deal with a Beatrice man, probably, O. L. Life, as manager the coming season. Life has been successful as manager of a semi-pro team, fans having been greatly disappointed in the work of "Ducky" Holmes and others who were tried out last season. A drive for funds necessary to meet the $900 forfeit if Beatrice is to remain in the league, will be put on within the next few days. It was stated.

Customs officers at Baltimore seized twenty cases of imported liquor.

BUSINESS WAS NOT SO GOOD IN MAJORS

As a Result Magnates Begin Talking Lower Salaries Which Will Unquestionably Precipitate Many a "Holdout."

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Business wasn't so good around the major league circuits last year. The pennant winning clubs and several of the western teams made money, but the usual bumper crops of cash weren't general by any means At least the magnates would have that believed

The result is very few raises for the poor ballplayers Several of the club owners will ask their athletes to suffer along on a smaller stipend until things "get better" Others who can afford their usual payroll may do the same thing to feel out the new union.

A Wave of Economy.

Whatever the reason, the wave of economy which has brought the majors and the minors to the point of open war no doubt will result in a great epidemic of holdoutitis as soon as the athletes get their contracts.

The usual threats of retiring to private business instead of playing ball are made Jake Daubert, Cincinnati Red infielder, has officially announced himself as ready to enter the coal business if he can't get $14,000 a year and George Mogridge, Washington pitcher, is looking for another business

Dutch Reuther, accused by Squire Ebbets of being the prime mover in the baseball players' union, is holding out for $12,000 and Zach Wheat, Andy High and several others on the Brooklyn Robins are not content with what they have been drawing. Ebbets probably will have a whale of a time before he gets thru.

John McGraw seldom has trouble with his players. The Giants are generous and the boys are all satisfied. The Yanks are the most liberal spenders in baseball, but the Yankee owners are going to reduce salaries this year.

Many of the threats made by holdout players are idle, but they give the magnate pain and worry just the same. The magnates ought to legislate against them.

KEARNS READY TO TALK TERMS

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Jack Kearns will leave Los Angeles for New York the middle of the week to talk terms with Tex Rickard for two appearances of Jack Dempsey in the ring next summer, according to a telegram received by Rickard.

EARLY PREDICTION FAVORS MICHIGAN

Manner in Which Wolverines Knock Minnesota Over Clearly Demonstrates Strength—Last Year's Champs Open Season.

By Lincoln Quarberg.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa emerged undefeated from the week-end's scramble for leading honors in the western conference basketball race.

Michigan, with two well earned victories to its credit, has exhibited greatest strength to date Forced to show their stuff Saturday night, the fighting Wolverines waded thru Minnesota, clearing demonstrating they will be foremost bidders for the title

Wisconsin added a third straight victory to her belt when she overran the Maroons Saturday night, but the Badgers met easy teams and their real strength is untried. The Michigan Wisconsin contest on February 10 will be a real battle.

Michigan invades Iowa City tonight and the result will be one of the best early indicators of championship strength. Both teams have a right to be proud of their title hopes. Iowa, however, is not expected to stop the Wolverines, a more experienced team.

Purdue, 1922 conference champions, will see their first action in the 1923 race tonight when they meet Northwestern at Lafayette. Northwestern is going good and has demonstrated scoring power, but the boilermakers are believed to have the edge.

Will Cause Trouble.

Illinois and Ohio State, tho not serious contenders for the pennant, are certain to cause a lot of trouble before the season ends.

Michigan's experienced five with keen eyes for the basket and with a five-man defense that has proved almost air-tight, will be hard to stop. Present dope favors them to win the cup.

Man Hurt Playing Basketball.

BYRON, Neb., Jan. 14.—Corley McNitt, a young railway laborer, of this place suffered two broken ribs Friday evening, when he ran into the stage while playing in a basketball game with the local team. The game was being played in the opera house, and the seats had been shifted from the center of the floor. The stage in the stront of the house is about three feet high, and McNitt accidently ran into the edge of it al full speed, striking his chest

BASKETBALL REFEREE IS HURT.

ELGIN, Neb., Jan. 15.—Kenneth C Hinmann, principal of the local schools was injured while acting as referee for a practice basketball game here. He stopped to pick up a ball and one of thep layers ran into him A deep gash was cut in his head.

CITY FIREMEN'S BALL.

The city firemen's relief association will give its annual ball on January 18 at the city auditorium. The grand march will be led by City Commissioner and Mrs. John Wright and Chief and Mrs Louis Hansen. Money taken in will be placed in the relief association fund, which now amounts to $2,850. The city pays two weeks salary to men off duty because of illness and the interest on this money is used to add to this amount and also to pay a $200 death benefit when a fireman dies.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Financial conditions in Europe remain the dominating factor in the wheat market. After all else is said and done, it is a question whether importers can pay for all the grain they require; whether it would be good policy for congress to pass the foreign credit grain bill; simply from a business mans standpoint is open to question ,but as to the benefit the agricultural community would derive there is no doubt.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Sterling was steady at the opening of the stock market today and active industrials scored fractional advances over Saturday's close.

California Petroleum, Utah Copper, U. S. Rubber, American Can, Studebaker and Anaconda Copper and most of the other representative industrials were strong in the early dealings, while a number of specialties displayed great buoyance. Postum was most conspicuous, soaring to 131 against last week's low of 113.

Opening prices included: Southern Railway 26⅜, up ⅛; Sinclair 34¼, up ⅛; Studebaker 116⅝, up ⅛; General Motors 14⅜, up ⅛; Pan-American "B", 87½; Midvale, 28; Marine, pfd. 43½, off ⅛; U. S. Rubber 62, up 1⅛; Anaconda 49¼, up ⅛; New Haven 18¾, off ⅛; Steel 105¾, up ⅛; American Can 84⅜, up ⅝.

Realizing sales interfered with operations for the rise in the second hour. Noticing the disposition of traders to take profits after substantial advances in many industrials, professionals were liberal with their offerings of California Petroleum, Studebaker, Baldwin, Pan-American and Steel. But these issues encountered good buying on receding movements which resulted and diminished the volume around noon followed setbacks of one to two points from the early highs.

Stock Market Opinions.

Lipper & Co.: Bearing unfavorable developments look for market to do better this week.

Post & Flagg: Prospects are for continuation of present trend.

Lamson Bros. & Co.: Foreign news continues to be ignored which is significant.

Harris Winthrop & Co.: The market is likely to sell higher.

Clark Childs & Co.: Equipments and steel look a buy on every dip.

Logan & Bryan: Some new constructive factors must appear before a general forward movement can get under way.

Block Maloney: We think a distinct step in advance has been taken.

UNCOMMON SENSE.

By John Blake.

Mental Marketing.

The experienced reporter at a railroad wreck, a political convention, or a great fire, goes about absorbing information.

Thru his eyes and ears vivid impressions are made on his mind. Some of them are made by important and significant happenings; some by trivial happenings.

When he sits down to write his story of the occurrence he must select the important from the unimportant. To interest people in what he has to write he must present the facts in the order—not necessarily of their occurrence, but in the order of their news value.

He goes shopping for facts as a buyer of a retail store goes shopping for goods. He collects and carries away with him only the goods that will prove of use.

Education to be of value in after life must be gained in the same way.

Only a mental phenomenon could remember all the facts he learned in a college course, and the memory of such a man would be so cluttered with useless material that it would be of little value to its owner.

Good memories are selective memories, not omnibus memories.

Even valuable information, if it can be readily found in reference books, need not be stored away in the mind.

It is the man who does carefully and selectively his mental marketing in life who has the best developed brain.

When he is not actually acquiring experience he is sorting out and ticketing his impressions and making a special effort to retain what he is certain will prove useful.

On a very small scale the same thing can be done with books or plays.

Few people reading a book or attending a play—even tho it be a play by Shakespeare—are benefited mentally.

For they proceed immediately to forget the story or the words of the actors as soon as the book is closed or the curtain has fallen.

But a few minutes spent in thinking over the tale or the drama immediately after it is read or seen would fix what is of value in the mind provided a little care was spent in deciding what was of value.

This, of course, involves hard work and, therefore, will not be done by many people. But those who are not afraid of hard work will find that careful mental marketing is worth many times the effort that it costs.

IN BUSINESS OR IN LOVE

One Rule That May Help You Make Good.

By Fay Stevenson.

Are you unsuccessful in business life?

Are you as much in love with your husband or wife as you were the day you were married?

If you are not at the top of your business or profession, if you have lost the "honey" of those early honeymoon days, it is your own fault.

That is the belief of Mrs. Mary E. T. Chapin, international lecturer of New Thought Alliance and a firm believer in autosuggestion. In special courses of study in Radcliffe college, in travel and by contact with the world of thought and purpose Mrs. Chapin has achieved a theory which has helped many men and women to see life in a new light.

Altho Mrs. Chapin is also a firm believer in Coue and firmly upholds the "Day by day, in every way, I am getting better and better" theory, her strong appeal is to put your whole faith in a generator, and the generator is yourself.

"You would not expect success in any undertaking unless you knew something about the undertaking," said Mrs. Chapin at the Hotel Commodore the other afternoon, when I asked her to enlarge upon her views. "You would not expect success as a singer if you were utterly ignorant of music. You would not expect success in painting if you knew nothing of color or drawing. You would not expect success in manufacturing if you knew nothing of machinery, labor and the processes of production. You would not expect success in merchandising if you knew nothing of goods, credits and salesmanship. You would not expect social success if you were ignorant of manners.

"But in the power plant of success these things are only the dynamo, the mechanism thru which the power is applied. There must be a generator and the generator is yourself.

"Yet people wonder why they are not successful who know nothing of the forces within them and the generation of power therefrom. It is not enough to know your business. You are what runs the business and you must know yourself, the nature of your powers and how to develop and direct them."

And this is where the autosuggestion of it all plays a vital part. Mrs. Chapin believes that many people are failures in life because of childhood suggestions. If a mother, an aunt or some know-it-all guardian has said: "You can't succeed if you go into that," that suggestion is apt to go with the man or girl to whom it is said all thru life. That first great faith in self has been weakened. Therefore, Mrs. Chapin's great plea is to cling to your first dreams and hopes and aspirations.

Because Mrs. Chapin has brought so many unhappy husbands and wives together, I asked her to tell me just how she reached them.

"By speaking to them of home, and what that word ought to mean to them," smiled Mrs. Chapin. "Every husband and wife values a home. When a man or a woman has to suddenly give up home life and face a boarding house world, hotel or a dreary apartment, the world seems to have stopped going around for them. Just mention the dear word h-o-m-e to any husband or wife who have been separated for a few months or possibly years and you will strike a chord—the most human chord in the wide world.

"The next step after you have awakened a dormant tie between separated husbands and wives is to lead them back to the first great love which drew them together. Why did they fall in love? Find the great charm which bound them together and then unravel the rest, all the petty arguments, the selfishness, the chilliness, false pride and money difficulties which have been woven together.

"And there again you lead back to self," pointed out Mrs. Chapin. "No matter what your difficulties in life are, if you can just put your hand on that generator (and the generator is yourself, remember) you will find the way out—the clear, smooth way."

How Sitting Bull Was Killed.

The old medicine man was yet asleep when the police arrived, but he was quickly aroused and told that he was under arrest and must accompany the police. He readily agreed to go with them, and while dressing gave orders to have his favorite horse saddled and brought to the door, which was done. He then stepped outside his cabin, closely followed by a cordon of the police with drawn revolvers.

Here his son, Crow Foot, a youth of seventeen, seeing that his father intended to make no resistance, taunted him with cowardice. By this time a hundred and fifty of Sitting Bull's followers had congregated about the cabin, and the old medicine-man, stung to the quick at the sarcastic remarks of his son, screamed out an order to attack the police.

Immediately two shots were fired by Sitting Bull's adherents, and in an instant the battle was on. Lieut. Bull Head, altho himself mortally wounded, immediately wheeled and shot the medicine-man thru the body, while Second Sergt. Red Tomahawk shot him in the right cheek, killing him instantly. Sitting Bull's medicine had failed him at last.

A bloody fight followed between the Indian police and their red brethren before the white troops arrived. Eight of the hostiles were killed and five wounded, while five or six of the police were killed.

This was the forerunner of the real war which followed on December 29, known as the battle of Wounded Knee—probably the last Indian war to be fought in the United States—in which nearly one hundred and fifty of the Sioux, men, women and children, were slain, while the loss to the troops was some thirty killed and as many more wounded.

The body of Sitting Bull was buried a few hundred yards south of the military cemetery at Standing Rock reservation, and thus passed the greatest disturber of the Sioux nation—an Indian who steadily refused to travel the white man's road and become reconciled to his mode of life.—Adventure Magazine.

Strategic Position.

Cortlandt Bleecker said at a dinner in New York:

"There was a lot of complaint during the war about the professional or West Point soldiers on the ground that they held down all the soft, safe jobs and did none of the fighting.

"I heard a story about a West Pointer, located in Philadelphia, a captain, who said to his colored boy servant the other day:

"'Well, Jefferson, it looks as if we might have another war soon. What will you do when hostilities break out?'

"'Ah guess Ah'll stay right here at home wid you, sah.'"—Los Angeles Times.

RADIO IN THE HOME

BY HENRY M. NEELY

A Talk About Magnetism.

The great majority of beginners in radio find it difficult to understand the reasons for the things they do in operating their sets principally because of their inability to get a clear mental picture of just what magnetism is and what it does.

Without this definite view of magnetism they cannot understand the principles of "induction," and as radio is founded upon the phenomenon of induction they are handicapped at the start in understanding their sets.

If I may be permitted to make a comparison that is not really an accurate one I will try to tell you something that may give you a better idea of this fundamental subject.

The process of "induction" in radio may be roughly compared to the swirl of air blowing a paper when an express train passes. The article explains it.

Almost everybody has stood on a station platform when an express train went thundering by and had to hold his hat on his head or else have it blown off. When a train dashes by at sixty miles an hour along a track it creates in the air an extremely strong current, and this current, striking your hat or a piece of paper or the dust along the tracks, is capable of imparting definite movements to these objects.

You can easily see that this movement is due to the train, altho the train and object are not in any way connected to each other. It is impossible for any object to move thru the air without creating a greater or less amount of this force in the air, and this force striking another object will exert upon it a force that will depend in amount upon the mass and speed of the original object that is creating it.

Whenever a current of electricity flows thru a wire it creates in the ether about it a force or an amount of motion that might be pictured mentally as something like the force or motion created in the air by the express train. The principal difference is that, whereas the air is sucked along in the direction of the train, the current of electricity throws its influence out at right angles to the direction of its motion.

Also you must remember that when we deal with magnetism we are not dealing with a motion in the air, but in the ether which is in every object that we know of. Just as it is impossible for any material objects to move thru the air without creating a disturbance, so it is impossible to send a current of electricity thru a wire without creating a disturbance in the ether around that wire. We can make the similarity go farther by saying that just as the air current created by the train is capable of imparting actual motion to your hat, so the field of magnetism thrown out by the electric current in the wire will, if it be permitted to cut thru another wire, create a current of electricity in the second wire, tho they are not connected.

A direct current which moves steadily in the same direction builds up this field of magnetism and the magnetism is capable of adding to the momentum or force of that current, just as it is theoretically conceivable that the strong current of air created by the train might serve to push the train farther along in its own path if the engine were suddenly stopped.

When we have an alternating current of electricity the current induced in a nearby wire will also alternate. This you can understand if you will imagine a double track railroad running north and south with a piece of paper lying between the two tracks.

When an express train goes north the paper is sucked in that direction. Then comes an express train going south and the movement of the paper is reversed and it goes in that direction.

So it is with an alternating current of electricity, which is first positive and then negative many times a second. The field of magnetism created by the positive current is the opposite to the field created by the negative current, and if you have another wire within reach of this magnetism the current created or induced in this second wire by magnetism will alternate in unison with the alternating currents in the first wire.

It is important to know that you can insulate electricity so that it will not go thru the insulation from one wire to the other, but there is no way of insulating magnetism. That is why we insulate wire on our coils.

It keeps the electricity in the original wire, but the magnetism rushes thru the insulation and creates electricity in the second wire.

LAND AND FARMS FOR SALE. 85

CALIFORNIA ALL THE YEAR!

THERE'S A REASON!

No other state has the climate the mountains, the seashore, the forests and fertile valleys, beautiful orchards and fields, with their tropical green and paved highways.

No other state is growing in population and wealth like California.

Yet California's area of desirable agricultural land is limited. Think what this means to the man, or woman who has the foresight to buy a productive home in the most talked of and most sought after country in the world and the only country, according to the census reports, where land increases in value from $200 to $2,000 per acre under improvement and will produce from $200 to $900 per acre yearly in crops.

Let us prove this to you. Come with us on our next excursion—we will show you the choicest lands in the state, in quality and location. Price $150 to $209 per acre, $20 to $50 per acre down. Fifteen years easy terms on balance, 6 per cent. Same quality of land surrounding selling for $1,000 per acre and more.

Smoked Him Out.

The sale of tobacco in France is a government monopoly, and the right to keep tobacco stores is granted by the ministry of the interior at the request of deputies who often desire thus to reward some of their constituents.

Georges Clemenceau was being annoyed by a deputy who persistently claimed one of the largest tobacco stores in Paris, the manager of which belonged to the opposition.

The third visit of the deputy to the ministry of the interior found the tiger in a sarcastic mood. "I can't decide about the tobacco store just yet," Clemenceau said, as he escorted him to the door, "but take this; it is a start at any rate."

And he handed the deputy a very small cigar.—Los Angeles Times.

MEN AND THINGS.

We don't like to appear captious, but isn't there some danger that the several hundred dollars of expense attached to providing amplifiers in representative hall will be multiplified vastly before the session is ended? An amplifier is employed for the purpose of increasing the volume of the voice, and the danger we hint at consists in this, that the members are likely to get a false idea of their oratorical ability. In other words they may become so charmed with the sound of their own voices that they will indulge too freely in the human weakness of talking too much. And it costs about $3,000 a day every day the legislature is in session.

Some interest is being taken in legislative circles in the proposition to increase the term of members to four years. This would mean that every member would serve at least two sessions. Taxpayers might find it worth while to mill over the proposition, since it is a change that only the people may make. The only part the legislature would have to do is to submit it as an amendment to the present constitution, and the people vote it up or down. An experienced member who is intent upon doing the best he can for the state is worth a lot more than a new member equally imbued with a desire for public service.

Most persons who desire to live decent and undisturbed lives have their moments when they feel like approving the existence of organizations like the ku-klux-klan that employ their activities in cleaning up municipal cesspools that the authorities are unwilling or unable to. They readily admit the danger to human liberty and government of the existence of extra-judicial tribunals that are unrestrained by law and which grow irresponsible in time, but there is something rather attractive to law-abiding people in the promptness with which the klan has brought about a change in conditions. The law, as we administer it, cannot rid a town of gamblers, petty thieves, scarlet women and the like because we cannot compel them to get out save only by frequent arrest and punishment, a long, tedious and costly way.

One of the greatest obstacles to strict enforcement of the law lies in the disinclination of persons to inform against violators. This attitude is due to several causes. One is that a person does not like to inform against another except when the offense is personal to himself. Another is that instinctive feeling that a fellow who is wicked enough to violate the law would have no compunctions about resorting to underhanded and secret means of getting even, which is a lot worse than to have him come over and beat you up. It was to lessen the possibility of this sort of reprisal that the original klan members donned the hood.

If the farmers will agree on what is the necessary thing to do to relieve their situation, that thing ought to be done by congress. Our own notion is that the chief reason why things have not been done that touch the right spot is that farm leaders cannot agree on a definite, specific remedy. True, they agree on programs, but this means mixing the medicine and experimenting with the patient. Not being a farmer, it appears to me that the real trouble lies in the fact that high freight rates have put too big a distance between the farmer and his market. If this be true, then we would do what the railroads did when they were developing the great west as an agricultural section, put down the rates on agricultural products and put up those on manufactured goods.

You probably notice how guarded are the predictions of the financial leaders. They agree that at the present time money is plenty, business is flourishing and times generally good. They refuse to say what may happen later on. The reason is that agriculture is not only not prosperous just now, but there is nothing to indicate a return to former satisfactory conditions, in the near future. Land values are lower than they were two years ago, and the principal profit in farming has come from the gradually increasing value of the land. Nobody can feel happy over his condition when his business is on an insecure basis.

It is a very serious matter with the chiropractics, but to the average outsider there are elements of a laugh or two in the warfare between the two schools or graduates of the two schools. Under the present law nobody can get a license to practice this system of healing unless they can meet certain requirements, including a three year course in a chiropractic college. One school turns out graduates in two years, and as these do not wish to operate under the ban of the law they want the law changed. The ones who are licensed now want to keep them out. They say that nobody can know too much when they start in to healing folks, and that three years is short enough.

Reading on the Screen.

The great publishing industry will be the publishing of motion pictures instead of print.

Motion picture libraries will be as common as private libraries today—more so.

Theaters will have the same relation to these libraries as the spoken theater today has to the printed copies of dramatic works.

By their very scope and area of appeal, the films must vastly outrank the stage in importance. The artistic development should be parallel, since one will always draw more or less from the other.

Talking pictures will have been perfected and perhaps have been forgotten again. For the world will have become picture trained, so that words are not as important as they are now.

All pictures will be in natural colors. The theaters will have special audiences; that is, there will be specialty theaters.

I do not foresee the possibility of instantaneous transmission of living action to the screen within 100 years. There must be a medium upon which the dramatic coherence can be worked out, and the perfected result set firmly, before the screen will be permitted to occupy the public's attention. In the instantaneous transmission there would be entirely too much waste of the public's time, and that is the important thing—time.—By David Wark Griffith.

United States a British Colony.

Henry L. Mencken: A hundred years hence the United States will be a British colony. Its chief function will be to supply imbeciles to read the current English novels and docile cannon fodder for the British army.

I believe that prohibition will be overthrown and restored several times before 2022. There will be periods of prohibition and wholesale drunkenness, as now, and periods of license and moderation. Just how the wave will be running in 2022 I hesitate to predict.

The American who will be most agreeably discussed by Anglo-American historians in 2022 will be Woodrow Wilson, the first premier of the United American colonies.

The greatest living American author is Dr. Frank Crane. He will be remembered long after Walt Whitman is forgotten.

American firms have invaded Sonneberg, Germany's greatest toy center. New buildings of American type have been erected, and factories are assuming an American aspect. One of the most conspicuous buildings is owned by Woolworth.

ABE MARTIN

Wouldn' it be fine if th' Federal court allowed th' consumer t' raise his rates when he don't break even like it does corporations? We don't know nothin' about Grover Bergdoll, but we know lots o' good reliable people that run int' Tom an' Jerry durin' th' holidays.

WALT MASON

Money Wanted.

Every day some plaintive gent at my humble home appears, asking me to give a cent I have earned in sweat and tears; "Dig up, in the name of Pete", says the gent, in accents sweet "we are building a retreat for consumptive auctioneers." Every hour some drivesmith bold to my cottage gallivants; for my stock of minted gold and my store of groats he pants; "Dig up from your treasure chest," is the drivesmith's stern behest; "we would build a place of rest for decayed and shopworn aunts." Long ago when people came on an errand of this kind, they were backward in the game, to its faults they were not blind; now the drivesmith doesn't plead; he is arrogant, indeed; "Hand us out the chickenfeed," is his dictum, unrefined. "If you do not promptly dig," says the man who asks my wad, "then your name in letters big will be advertised abroad; to the confines of the state you will have a record great as the cheapest sort of skate, as a piker and a fraud." Let us stop these endless drives which the wartime made a fad, for they shoo from people's lives all the joy they ever had; let's discourage all the bores who go round to people's doors asking for all kinds of ores, for the bawbee and the scad.

A SMASHUP

By Walter Wellman.

There has been a bad smashup, as you will see by the pieces. Cut them out along the dotted lines, and paste them together on a stiff piece of cardboard, and see what it was originally.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle: ALPACA and COUGAR.

Feminine Viewpoint.

Agnes Repplier, the brilliant essayist of Philadelphia, was talking about housekeeping.

"Housekeeping is one unending annoyance," he said. "You've either got a servant, or you're without one."—Los Angeles Times.
